CARL SANDBURG FINDS CIVIL WAR

DAVES OF GEORGIA VERY INTERESTING

He finds that people are always desperately for or against the South concerning the Confederate War. To him, the war heroes are most striking figures. Alexander Stephens being one of the most prominent. In regard to making the Southern heroes even more attractive to the public, he suggests that they be used as leading characters in plays. Mr. Sandburg believes Lincoln would have softened the blow for the South if he had lived.

Days of Georgia Very Interesting

POET IS WORKING ON FOURTH VOLUME OF LINCUM'S LIFE

Mr. Carl Sandburg, famed poet who visited in Valdosta on Monday and Tuesday, told reporters that he found the South very homelike. He has been in South Georgia several times before, and finds the people, the scenery and the history of the section most interesting.

Mr. Sandburg is now working on a continuation of his work "Abraham Lincoln" to include the war years. He has found a wealth of material in letters, written in the war period, in standard histories and in documents of slavery, such as tax receipts and bills of sales, and is indeed an authority on this period of Southern history.

"Gone With the Wind," Margaret Mitchell's book, has caused people who read it to begin "fighting the war all over again" according to Mr. Sandburg.

New Game Equipment Arouses Enthusiasm

A game that has taken the gym classes by storm is shuffleboard. Through heavy and constant use the gym floor, sticks, and blocks are showing signs of wear and tear. A plea for more exciting games of this sort goes up.

Eileen Hyland, who has been playing a great deal along with June Lawson, C. J. Morris, and Dody Wilson, finds that it is possible, but hardly probable, to place four blocks in the -{- 10 space. Ouida Murdock says that she is the best -{- 10 space player, averaging around four or five — 10’s in one game.

At the present rate of playing shuffleboard one can hope only that a trace of the board will be left for Play-Day May Day.

Badminton is a new game that will be better organized next year, as equipment is lacking as yet for the game. Badminton is a cousin of tennis, yet is a much faster moving game.

Gertrude Gilmer's father lived for many years in Galesburg, the poet's birthplace. The white-haired, erect poet with his ready smile and refreshing personality made many admirers during his stay here.

He is completing, at present, the fourth of a series of volumes on Abraham Lincoln — The War Years. After reading some of his poems and original selections, Sandburg, also a musician, favored his audience with numerous songs, to the accompaniment of his guitar.

The purpose of the chapter is to serve as a medium for the rewarding of outstanding journalistic work—membership will be the privilege of wearing the official key; to provide incentive for better contributions by conducting contests, initiation, and presenting of keys will take place.

The shortest song I know," smiled the author, "is this one, and he proceeded to sing, "Great God I'm feeling bad; I ain't got the man I thought I had."

Other numbers were the Dishwashing song, the Texas Bell Weevil, an Illinois state selection, and an arrangement of three negro spirituals.

The poet deKuned poetry, among other things, as the "achievement of a synthesis of a hynnchord and a biscuit. It is invisible, indefinite, inexplicable."

The moon and the soft spring breezes bring romance to one's mind — and speaking of romances that brings to mind telegrams 'specially Hardman, Mayberry, and Spies ... the Tech boys at the dance were divine — goodie, goodie ... flower picking for May Day ... poster costumes and scenes are seen everywhere.

Little-Griffin Hospital was visited Tuesday at the second period by Miss Matilda Calloway and the Home Furnishing Class. Special attention was given to the modern equipment which so greatly contributes to beauty, convenience, economy and a saving of time. Conveniently placed windows and sky lights give the hospital ample light. Sound proof walls and ceilings are used.

Student Pets Include an Alligator,
Canary, Clown and Dolls

What would you do if while calmly strolling down Converse Hall you very unexpectedly met an alligator and not a lalavender one at that? Who knows; this could happen. Dody Wilson has a tiny black and yellow alligator inhabiting her private bath tub. The affectionate pet answers to the name of Gus. Every morning "bright and "too early," Mary Virginia Williams is awakened by the melodious songs of "Pinky," her five year old canary. Very often while broadcasting the Canary Hit Parade, "Pinky" is banished from the room, so Mary Virginia may study.

G. S. W. C. has her own "Frankie and Johnnie." They are none other than Helen Joiner's gold fish who have a blazing red ribbon tied around the top of their bowl. Freddie Lambert also goes in for gold fish. "Hers are Connie and Dissy and quite charming they are!"

Lorene Johnson and Laura Mae Shinn have pet elephants. Lorene's red and white checkered Muttalas stands motionless on the dresser while Laura Mae's "Goo-Goo," hidden from the eyes of the world occupies a closet shelf. Maybe she's afraid that Mr. Ringling will come along and snatch her "Goo-Goo" from her.

Nestling on Martha Johnson's bed is a white Persian kitten with a red bow around "it's" neck. It is an "it" because "it" is imitation.

Janet Clements could not get a "Man on the Flying Trapeze," so she chose Wilson the circus clown for next best.

Mary Catherine Abernathy's "Oscar the Duck is a pet plus—scissors, needles and pins."

Who would have expected to find Goldilocks and one of the three bears in G. S. W. C.? Mary Askew is Goldie and Michael "Butch," the bear.

Kitty consoles herself with dolls. She has a (mother) Bill, a Marie Dionne in a green basket, a chocolate colored palmeta, and a pair of pink celluloid twins. Roommate Emma Ambos contents herself with Oswald and Henry the Rabbits. All the G. S. W. C. pets would make up a circus; all that is needed is a lion plus a couple o' camels and Ringling would have a real rival!
Funeral expenses in New York City are said to average about $400. Last week the Legislature had before it bills which would establish municipal funeral authorities to perform the last rites at low prices. Proponents of the measures had studied European experience with such public authorities.

George VI has put the royal crest of Scotland on his shooting pieces in honor of his Scottish Queen. The crest is ornate and streamlined. His liking for adornment follows the tradition of Victoria. Edward VIII believed in simple modernistic designs.

The National Republican Clubhouse in Scott Circle, Washington, D. C., is for sale. In 1929, it was purchased for $150,000. "The building" it was explained, "was too big for the organization to carry right now."

The Rumanian royal family's troubles bubbled over in politics recently when King Carol II stripped his brother Prince Nicholas of royal status, titles and military rank and ordered him to quit the country. The ostensible reason was that Nicholas refused to renounce the commoner wife he married seven years ago.

Monkeys and rats will be used in a test for the carrier of yellow fever in the jungles of Brazil. The guilty mosquito there is not the Aedes Egypti. Brazil is the only known place where the fever has not been eradicated.

ARTISTS ARE HUMAN

When we have notables on our campus, why do we insist upon hounding them for autographs and staring at them with our mouths open?

The artists who come to our campus are really human beings in spite of the fact that they are outstanding personalities who have contributed something worthwhile to our civilization. They would appreciate it if we did not treat them as animals in a cage.

We miss the chance of talking informally with, and getting a different aspect of the artists, than we do sitting in the audience of an auditorium, because they do have the feeling that we are not very sincere.

After all, in years to come, just exactly how much will it mean to us in pulling the strings of our civilization.

Why pick the library of all places to meet your friends for a general get-together? Why pick the library of all places to meet your friends for a general get-together when there is no place in college life for cheating.

There is no place in college life for cheating. Students have said, "Colleges are so different from high school." In both there are things that are done and things that aren't. There is no talking out loud in high school. It was rather smart and cute to cheat. Everyone did it in college.

There is no place here and no one does it. Someone said of our own G. S. W. C., "One of the best things I like about G. S. W. C. is that there is no cheating.

Cheating is such a futile thing that it seems hard to think that it is a "shipping" offense. After all the student does not come to college for grades. That a student would cheat seems pathetic to me. It seems that she is missing something important—the knowledge that she is not hurting anyone but herself. As we come to college it seems to me that grades are no longer so essential; the knowledge that one gains is, after all, that grade for that individual.

Some say parents cause their children to cheat by demanding a certain rate of grades. Parents should realize that when a boy or a girl goes to college he or she is on his own and after all it takes time to orientate himself to the new freedom and new mode of life.

And some students will agree with you that cheating is stealing. That it does no good to the individual and that it really harms one in the end.
