Will Roosevelt persuade Congress to pass his Supreme Court plan? Legislative leaders believe that the court reorganization plan will bring the severest test before the White House and Capitol questioned in recent years. The pending law allows him to name six new justices. His program also calls for a great deal of money for relief. The reception in Washington that some of the measures he suggests may have to be compromised and others delayed until next session for final action.

NEWS OF COLLEGIATE PRESS

The Georgia Collegiate Press Association sponsored by the Henry Grady School of Journalism and the University of Georgia completed its fourth year of existence with the annual convention held May 21 and 22 at Armstrong Junior College in Savannah.

The association was organized in Athens in 1933 under the leadership of John E. Drewry, Head of the School of Journalism, and the founding convention was held at the College of Education. The purpose of the organization was to provide a means of recognizing meritorious journalistic efforts through the annual award of suitable distinctions; (2) to raise the standards of the college press of Georgia and (4) to foster among college journalists of Georgia an interest in journalism. The association has been most successful in fulfilling these objectives; these have made up the Emory Wheel. The Press-Nexus Trophy for Junior College papers went to the University of Georgia, the Red and Black, newspaper of the University of Georgia. The Honor Rating, the highest award given, is the Red and Black, newspaper of the University of Georgia. The Honor Rating Trophy, given by the Associated Collegiate Press of the National Student Press Association, was awarded to the Emory Wheel of Emory University.

Addresses made by outstanding newspapermen in Georgia emphasized the good work being done by college journalists. ### TO THE GRADUATES

There is food for thought to one who has watched the steady stream of young women come and go, and so many of them spending the four most important years of their lives within the college walls.

The college is the result of the combined influence of the people, faculty and students, who have guided its destiny, set up its ideals, and maintained its standards. No one has passed this way but has left something of herself or himself here. Something of attitudes, emotions, and character, some impress of that intangible thing we call personality.

The splendid young women have stood all that is fine and good and true on the campus. We are told that we love the things we have worked for, sacrificed for and believed in. You are our finished product. We say to the world, “There are the young women we give back to society.” It is only through theirExample that we justify our existence. We fail as you fail, we succeed as you succeed. As you take your places in the world, intelligent, poised, able to carry your part of the social structure, and to aid those less able, you are our reason for being, you are beyond price to your Alma Mater.}

Cinema Cynic

By Priscilla Kelley

Tennis seems to be a short route into films, a fact which has not eluded us—we practice daily. There is Frank Shields, who’s being stopped right along in pictures; Fred Perry married Helen Vinson, and Carole Lombard induced Paramount to make a deal with champion Alice Marble. How is your game by the way?

After many films, W. C. Fields will emerge from his tepee soon to make another Paramount picture. He is looking fine and hasn’t had a drink of fire water for more than a year. Scouts were sent out by Fields not long ago to rent a home for him so that he could leave the sanitarium, and a big place was found in Bel Air. He now runs around giving fierce Injun war whoops and bragging about “My Indian blood.”

The SENIORS

By Priscilla Kelley

After working, studying, struggling, and playing for two years, the class of 1937 comes to graduation, and many of them are asked if they will graduate and how the world of tomorrow will be improved by their presence. This is the question, but even more than this, Mary Hargreaves was asked if she will continue to read, and if so, how.

Mary Askew dreams of teaching, and Frances Carson knows that she will always be thinking of Mary in the living room of her first grade home. In the window pane one day she will see a girl in a grade, and all the girls will be thinking of Mary. She must work hard, but she will miss most court, Miss Carter rubbing her back, or the long labs spent mixing chemicals with chemicals.

Standing on corners, giving whenever the notion comes, is the grandest thing about college to Estelle Ricks; but Alice Daley wonders how she can do without the cracks in the Kaliedoscope.

Emma Ambos, after several years on the campus, found out that she will miss most court, Miss Carter rubbing her back, or the long labs spent mixing chemicals with chemicals.

Freshman Breaks All Archery Records Here

Shooting a score of 400 to win a gold medal, Miss Montine Cowart of Waycross, broke all archery records on the G. S. W. C. campus. Miss Cowart, who is a freshman and a member of the Phi Lambda Association, took up archery only this year. She won her bronze medal and quickly followed it with a silver medal.
