Week of November 7
To Be Dedicated To National Education

The week of November 7 through November 13 will be dedicated to the American Education Week. The drive will have as its theme "Victory Through Education." Having been established in 1925, the American Education Week grew out of the First World War. Because such a high percentage of the drafted men were illiterate, a campaign of public education was needed. This was seen as a correction. As a result of the cooperation between American Legion women and the American Education Week was observed in 1925.

The National Education Association has rendered invaluable services to the American Education Week. Such services include: helping teachers; teaching; helping increase teachers' salary; helping improve curricula of elementary, high school, college, and university.

The present drive is attempting to clarify the part teachers will play in the post-war world. Topics for the week will be given the evidence of the scope of the National Education Associations. Topics include: "Education and World Understanding." Education and Work." "Education and Security." "Education and Safety in Education," "Education for Victory in Education." "The School and Society" class will present a program for this week. Daily radio talks have been prepared and will be presented on WGOV. The Education class, under the supervision of Miss Virginia Goodwin, will carry on the same program of instruction for the next few weeks.

Miss Goodwin believes nursing, as a war profession, offers great opportunities. Nurses will be needed after the war, both here and abroad. There will be a great demand for nurses in hospitals, health centers, in the nursing of veterans.

"Nursing," she states, "is war work and war work with a future."

Classes Will Have Social " Coffees"

The Junior Class will be bauted at the after-dinner coffee Sunday afternoon in the Rotunda. At this time Carolyn Mann, Evelyn Gillis, and Pauline Johnson will be in charge of the music.

This event is dedicated to the entire student body. It has been announced that each class on campus will sponsor a "coffee" to bring students toward winning the war and peace.

ELECT YOUR OFFICERS WISELY AND SUPPORT THEM

Next week the Freshman Class will go to the polls to elect a president of the class and a representative to court.

Those people will guide and represent you during the coming year. So it is important that you consider carefully their candidates for these offices.

During the past six weeks many things have happened in the life of each freshman. She has come out to campus for the first time, met new roommates, learned unfamiliar regulations, and changed her entire pattern of life completely. She is well settled in her dormitory life and knows practically everyone on her floor—none of the few classmates, upperclassmen, teachers, and such. She should therefore, make wise choices in nominating and electing her class officers for the year.

A class president should have a number of qualities. First of all, she should be a good leader, bright, and hardworking. She should possess foresight, patience, and ability to win the cooperation of others. She, and the court representatives, must get along with flying colors and must influence others to do likewise. In short, she must meet all the privileges and responsibilities of her office, make a wise selection when you elect your class officers. Elect those people who seem most capable of performing the necessary duties.

Study the abilities of each candidate and think carefully about the duties of the positions and stand by them!! Don’t forget to vote—it’s your election—and do support the girls who have your confidence, your trust, and your votes. Do not be in the minority in any of these activities. In short, the Freshman Class needs you. And you must meet all the privileges and responsibilities of the office you hold. If you do not get along with your new roommate, her roommate, and your friends, and stand by them!!! Don’t forget to vote—it’s your election—and do support the girls who are elected!!!
You Hate To Break Mirrors, et Black Cats, Spit Salt?

By DOT SAWYER

...she superstitions? When your ski tail, do you immediately stiffen your back, quicken your step, and whisper to no one?

Do you think a person who wishes to do something or avoid something in accordance with the superstitions that he or she believes are true or false? It is a behavior that is really quite common and can be traced back to ancient times.

Many superstitions revolve around the belief in the supernatural or the idea that certain actions can influence the outcome of events. A common example is the belief that breaking a mirror brings seven years of bad luck, or that spitting salt is unlucky.

However, it is important to remember that superstitions are not based on evidence and can vary widely from culture to culture. They are often rooted in a society's beliefs and fears, and can be passed down through generations.

As with any cultural practice, it is important to understand the context and origins of superstitions, and to consider how they may be affecting individuals and society as a whole.
Girls Give Campus Saturday Clean-Up

We would like to thank all you girls who climbed out of bed Saturday morning and took a part in cleaning up our campus. Ten o'clock is rather early on a Saturday morning, but a large crowd at the log cabin ready to start on work. Frankly, they were dressed in many different ways, some with shoes or riding clothes and so on in skirts and sweaters, but they all had the spirit! Everyone who attended the council (in fact those who managed to get there) were given a certain area of the campus and also a group of girls. Lots of the girls seemed to like the idea of going to Brookwood Park to work. Maybe it was just the atmosphere they liked, or maybe they wanted more to do of this kind, or maybe it was because the cold weather had turned off the Pharmacy board. You can decide for yourself but after the girls completed their jobs on campus, they struck off to help those in the Park.

Anyway, everyone did a grand job and we were proud of it. It was lots of fun as well as work and we are planning to have such clean-up days about once a quarter. Let's all keep our campus clean so that we won't have to have them more often!
