Campus Poll Reveals Many Real Little Sisters Here

By ANNE SHIPPE

Advantages in having a little sister vary from one person to another. For some, the drawback to having a little sister is that she is "too much trouble." For others, however, the little sister is nothing but a source of pleasure and fun. One advantage of having a little sister is that it is easier to be taken seriously. The older sister has to consider the possibility that she is being taken seriously, whereas the little sister is often the center of attention. Another advantage is that it is easier to get along with a little sister. Little sisters are generally more patient and understanding than older sisters. They are also more likely to be happy to do things for you.

The little sister is often the one who is the first to notice when something is wrong. She will be the first to ask you if you are feeling well, and she will be the first to suggest that you go to the doctor. She is also the one who will be the first to enter your room when you are feeling down. She will be the one to comfort you and make you feel better. She is the one who will be the first to tell you when you are doing something wrong. She will be the one to help you correct your mistakes and learn from them.

The little sister is also the one who will be the first to think of you when you are not around. She will be the one to call you when you are feeling down, and she will be the one to pray for you when you are feeling down. She is the one who will be the first to notice when you are not doing well, and she will be the one to tell you when you are doing wrong. She is the one who will be the first to think of you when you are not around. She will be the one to call you when you are feeling down, and she will be the one to pray for you when you are feeling down.
A Glance Into Our Future

P.R. NOTE-The following was written by T. F. Burleigh, Lieut. Comdr., return from overseas duty. It is in the form of a post-war world, and is published here as a prelude to a poll to determine the subject of the next page.

Of the many so-called "World Impenders" which confront the human mind through the era, none hold the interest nor the thoroughness of study as that of the Impenders of the moment. The thoroughness of our study of the other Impenders is complete and only study of the World's most brilliant minds, always slightly above the mental reach of the drowning mass of mankind, is the solution, and apply it in a worldly procedure.

We have been led to believe that every problem has its solution, and with that encouragement, we have conducted, conducted on assumption as we have no precedent to path the way. And in having no precedent, we have been led to believe that the solution will be difficult and confusing, its barriers and sense of failing. But, it is not hopeless. "There is a key to the sea, but only one who would dare search in vain will find it," is a proverb known to the World as all of her impenders. The key is knowledge, the knowledge and understanding which has captured the attention of our most astound philosophers of today. It has become the complete and only study of the World's most brilliant minds, always slightly above the mental reach of the drowning mass of mankind, is the solution, and apply it in a worldly procedure.

But, war or peace, the people of the Earth will accept any generally en-...

Stafford Interviews Fresh On All-Important Quiz

By CAROLYN STAFFORD

And that is the question that 179 (or more) Freshmen want the answer to. And by the way, if you ask me of the unanswerable, I think you’re on the wrong answer. Well, I thought and thought, and still no brainstorm. But there was a good storm up the hall, so I had to investi­gate and before I could be struck right then and there, with the brilliant idea of letting the other Freshmen answer the question. So I packed away my pencil and paper and started on my merry way.

The first person I saw or rather recognized (I had left my glasses home), was Annette Moniy hanging out some unmentionables on the clothesline. She was very busy, so I cautiously approached my merry wa^.

and asked her the question of home), was Annette Moniy hanging out some unmentionables on the clothesline. She was very busy, so I cautiously approached my merry way and asked her the question. She looked surprised and said, “That’s what I’ve been wondering all along. But there was a good storm up the hall, so I had to investigate and before I could be struck right then and there, with the brilliant idea of letting the other Freshmen answer the question. So I packed away my pencil and paper and started on my merry way.

Still undaunted, I walked into a nest of hens in someone’s room. I asked her and she replied with a shrug of her shoulders, “I’ve no idea. I’ve been so busy.”

Upon being popped the question, she looked surprised and said, “What’s that? I’ve been wondering all along. But there was a good storm up the hall, so I had to investigate and before I could be struck right then and there, with the brilliant idea of letting the other Freshmen answer the question. So I packed away my pencil and paper and started on my merry way.

And next, and last will be the dance in the Ree Holl that will go on and on into the night past the usual curfew line. So come on, girls. Let’s take the cue and make all the little things that we do in the classroom and at home worth doing. Let’s show our class officers, our faculty, as well as each other that we can give them the best possible display of patriotism.

To all the members of the class, remember when you hear the word "cram," to say "stop" and generally to keep G. S. W. C. up and going on in the right direction. A Spirit of Cooperation
