W. S. B. Salutes Valdosta State

The South's most widely heard disc-jockey, Bob Watson of WSB in Atlanta, began a one-week salute to V.S.C. via his popular Platter Party on Monday night, April 2.

Students were invited to choose the songs for all five programs comprising the salute. The request procedure was simple: just jot down the title of your favorite song, ask that it be dedicated to your favorite person or organization.

On Monday night's opening, Mary Brand, the Women's Student Government Association president, was heard in an interview with Watson, recorded from the campus by long distance telephone. On Tuesday night a special guest was bandleader Frankie Carle.

This salute to VSC was another in the Platter Party's CAMPUS SALUTE series which already has honored such schools as Georgia Tech, Emory University, Agnes Scott College, and the University of Georgia. During the week, Watson told his 20-state audience about VSC's history and present eminence among colleges in the United States.

OLD MAID

My life was intended by the Almighty God,
To be independent and free,
And so far as I'm concerned,
There'll be no man for me.

Men, not money, are the root of all evil,
They lie, they curse, they cheat.
They are good for nothing, and do nothing for good,
And of them we must delete.

Why any female would want a male,
Just give me a home and a
Is more than was revealed to me.
flop-eared dog,
And happy together we'll be.

Dance Group Plans Recital

The V.S.C. Dance Group will present its recital in the Valdosta High School Auditorium Tuesday, April 17, at 8:30 p. m.

The program comprises a wide variety of numbers ranging from light ballet to heavy drama, and for the first time the Dance Group can boast of the assistance of male students. One performance in an exhibition ballroom number, and three appear in "Slaughter", which, as its name implies, includes in its plot a homicide or two.

The feature of the program is "Fable", a re-composed and abridged version of a mythical ballet danced here several years ago.

Other numbers include: "Affirmation", a majestic dance; "Pas Classique", in classic ballet style; a can-can; "Ritual Fire Dance", repeated by request from the group's previous recital; "Aboriginal", a dance ala primitive; "Galliard", a XIV century dance, forerunner of modern ballet; "Sevilana", a strict Spanish dance with castanets; "First Circle", having to do with a portion of Dante's Inferno.

The finale is again a Spanish dance—Ravel's famous "Bolero".

Composition of the dances has been done almost entirely by members of the group.

Tickets may be secured from members of the Dance Group. Admission for adults is $1.00, for students fifty cents.

The officers elected in the Women's Student Government Association are: Joan Dekle, president; Mary Holder, E. C. A. chairman; Martha Barrs, first vice-president; Laura Ann Bowen, secretary-treasurer.

SMITH "You Can Write About"

"You can write about the fact that we've been going to classes two weeks now and there's still a chance to make good grades. I know it's over-worked, but it's still important." Yes, no matter how overworked the topic of studying and pulling up bad grades may be, grades still remain to haunt us. The Dean's List for winter quarter had considerably more students on it than the one of the previous quarter, and there is no reason that the size of this listing should decrease this quarter. Of course, there are more things to do spring quarter, we might be tempted to say, but the well-rounded student should be able to take extra-curricular activities and find a place for them in his or her schedule and maintain good saudy habits.

"You can write about everybody taking a week of and sleeping." Maybe we could use a little more sleep. We all rush around doing the numerous little things that arise every day and when night comes we realize we have yet to study. With a small amount of planning and budgeting of time we would all find that we have time for work, play, the little incidentals, and a sufficient amount of sleep.

"You can write about the sales tax." The sales tax is with us to stay and we at VSC have felt its sting without leaving the campus. Everything over 14 cents is being taxed the sum of three cents on a dollar. It seems rather bad that books must be taxed along with the necessities of life. Students can be heard groaning loudly everytime they buy their books at the first of the quarter. Now we are told, "The book is three dollars and a half with a dime tax." Of course the tax has its good side. A great part of the money which is collected by means of this tax is to go into the financing of the Minimum Foundation Program. This will insure qualified teachers of a sufficient salary. "And though some may consider the sales tax a nuisance until they become used to it, in the long run it will pay generous dividends to the sovereign state of Georgia and its people."

For the first time in many years we are enjoying a real spring. Heretofore, when winter left us summer stepped in crowding spring entirely out of the picture. Not so in 1951.

A-i-i-i—Not The Needle!

HENDERSON

Being the sort of person who thinks that she and she alone can do everything and do it well, I sing in the choir at Church each Sunday. I remember it all like it was just last week . . . I was coming down the aisle, harmonizing to the top of my lungs, when all of a sudden, the floor reached up and pulled me down, and I walked along for a while on my face and one ankle before the floor won. (I blame it on the floor because I'd hate to condemn the person walking just behind me, but it really might have been that I was tackled for being so far off key . . .) The next thing I knew, I was crawling to one of the front pews, while streams of tears plowed ditches in my make-up. As I think back, I confess that it didn't hurt my ankle half as much as it did my dignity, and the tears were those of utter mortification! At any rate, the pleasant quietness of the Church right after the Service gave way to confusion, as the vast majority of the persons contained therein came forward to count the broken places in my bones, and mutter "tsk! tsk!" Last rites! Three persons stand out in my mind as taking control of the situation, and to spare them any embarrassment, I refrain from calling their names, but if you MUST know who they are, look for the three who are going around now with sagging clavicles from supporting my weight from the church to the car and from the car to the infirmary. As I made my painful way up to the infirmary, leaning on one of them, a crutch that was made for John Wayne's height, and the shoulder of the nurse, I determined that the very first thing I would buy when I have graduated and gone out in the world and am rich and famous, is an elevator for the building!

One of the first things you notice when you near the infirmary is how much it looks and smells like one. Isn't it amazing? I was ushered to one of the beds that didn't have a cold and runny nose in it, and instructed to disrobe, because my roommate would shortly be up with my pajamas and other commodities. They were right . . . shortly my roommate did appear, with just those things. I wonder if we have some carrier pigeons around here to do all the dirty work? I have yet to see a 'phone. Clad in my pajamas, I bade my clothes and my friend goodbye, and turned my attention to a large bubbling pan of hot

So Dimly You See

By PAT ASKIN

How many times have you grabbed your books, and without so much as saying good-bye to your room-mate, slammed out of your room and dashed down to the monitor's desk to sign out, and hurriedly left the dormitory because of the noise there? Maybe there isn't too much actual noise, but still somehow there seems to be an atmosphere of disturbance.

Then, as you walk out of the dormitory into the calm and quiet of the night, you think to yourself you'll go where there's peace and quiet. The one time in the week you decide to study, everybody else wants to talk about her boy friends. Students just don't seem to have any respect for their friends.

All the dark way to the library you think of the quietness there, and the atmosphere of study you'll find. As you walk closer to the sanctuary of study your determination to work becomes stronger.

Then you walk into the grey building of learning and books and after a few nods to acquaintances you find an empty chair and spread your books out on the table to pursue knowledge for the next day's classes.

You then open a book to begin reading, but something seems wrong. Oh yes, you forgot to put your glasses on, so you reach into a pocket and pull them out. You put them on and start to read again, but something still isn't right. Maybe they need cleaning, water which had materialized by my bedside. I gathered from what was told me that this was to be the future residence of my left foot, the one which now had as much life to it as a block of wood, except when I tried to move it. Time passed, and another player was introduced into the already crowded cast of characters. He, I was informed, was the doctor, and seizing my foot like a bird of prey, he adjusted his glasses and proceeded to find just where the worst of my hurts was at the moment, and believe me, he found it in a big way. If he ever goes searching for gold, he'll make a fortune! Disregarding my poor ankle like it belonged to another caste, he de-materialized, and left me holding the pan of water and a hot water bottle. As soon as one cooled to boiling, the other was put in use. Finding that this was to be my schedule, at least for the next twenty-four hours, I set about making the acquaintance of the rest of the vict—I mean, patients in the other two beds. These, I learned from many questions and close and careful scrutiny, were colds. They had been here for varying amounts of time, and for some reason, they lay in their beds at peculiar angles. I couldn't imagine the cause of it, and thought perhaps my eyes needed a change of glasses, until I dozed off to sleep, to be awakened by the sounds of "A-i-i-i! Not the needle!", and I opened my eyes to find the little nurse using the guest in the next bed for target practice, armed to the teeth with a vicious looking needle loaded with something referred to as Penicillin. I lay on my back, quivering with fear, lest I be remembered and put in use, too!

The number of things one can do while confined are various and sundry. You can read or write a letter or sleep or soak your foot or start all over again. Oh yes, and you can cat, and can I cat! I think my appetite will be the cause of my release, rather than my recovery to radiant health. The doctor was here again just a while ago, and he told me I could go home, so as soon as I find out how I'm supposed to travel on this thing which is laughingly referred to as a foot, I will be on my way . . . what's that? I can't go because I can't travel on it yet? I'll sue . . . I'll write my congressman . . . aw, what the heck. I'll just stay here 'til I can amble freely and then run like the very dickens! Be careful, or they'll get you too!

Farewell—

With this issue of the CAMPUS CANOPY the present staff brings to a close its year of publication. On behalf of the staff the editor would like to thank the student body for their interest in the paper. A new editor will be in charge of the next issue of the paper and we wish her every success. We urge the student body to cooperate with her and the other members of the new staff in every way possible.

you think, so you leave your chair and go upstairs to the lavatory to wash the lens. There, you think, this should fix things, so down the stairs you go, and back to your chair, quite ready to resume your attempts to study. Again you start reading, but still something is wrong. Wonderingly you look around to see what the trouble is. Then, suddenly, you realize what is the root of this evil. It is the lights! Oh yes, they're up there, but they're so far up and so dim that you, with your ~~eyes~~ couldn't see them if it wasn't for your glasses perched on your nose.

Of course the lights are in very attractive chandeliers, attractive for a medieval castle, you think, but it does seem to you that in a place where so many people come, and while they are there, use their eyes so much, could have better and brighter lights.

Nevertheless, you try to study once again, but the lights are so dim, and so improperly placed

DAME Belief—Essential Always

There is something in the basic endowment of men that either make or break them as careful human beings. It is my conclusion that belief is that certain something. It makes no difference what a person believes, so long as he believes in something. The beliefs of man run in many directions. He either believes in God or he doesn't, he believes that politics are fair or that they are corrupt. Man's belief about women run from angels to heartless beasts. Be that as it may man, as an individual, must have supreme confidence in himself in order to achieve his ultimate aim. He, I use he just as an example, must believe that he, or his cause, is the greatest thing in existence.

In a fashion, school spirit is a cause that we of Valdosta State must further to its utmost. We have in V.S.C., potentially, one of Georgia's finest institutions. With all these potentialities we also have a decided lag in school spirit. It is evident in many places: the campus, club meetings, attendance of dances and Brookwood. It is true that we are in better shape than others. Now is the time for that supreme confidence in our cause to come front. Now, in V.S.C.'s infant years as a co-educational school, it is more vital than ever before. We must get behind our school now and boost it to greater glories. Our unbiased and energetic supreme belief in ourselves and our school must work together to make V.S.C. more attractive to those who are considering entering V.S.C. in the fall.

JONES Looking Through Rose Colored Glasses

"Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is fairest of them all?" How many times have we heard this very familiar quotation, not only in the fairy tale, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, but in real life? In American slang a name is given to all arrogant and egotistical people. Literally, we will not say, but expressively they may be called Lady or Master Asterbuilt.

In America's principles of government, there is an implication that all men are created equal. But Miss Asterbuilt cannot seem to understand that there are such things as equality.

What are the causes for her self-centeredness? Many people would say that she is a "spoiled brat" who has always had everything she has ever wanted. Unfortunately, we cannot have everything we want. Needless to say, our Miss Asterbuilt could not have everything she wanted no matter what her social or economic status. A parallel to this might be found in world peace. All the money in the world could not overpower the evils of men which have caused wars. Something beyond the power of money and political feat is our only assurance of peace.

How can Miss Asterbuilt overcome her haughtiness? First she must come down from her pedestal and stop looking down on everybody. There are many people, great scientists, inventors, educators, politicians, and artists, who are more experienced in their fields. However, in a spiritual way they are the same as the butcher, the clerk and to think that he or she is better than anybody even th ditch digger. No single person has reason else. We are all the same, no matter what race or creed.

Miss Asterbuilt should realize that she is not helping in the making of a better world. She should be thoughtful and considerate of someone other than herself. The world demands people with tact, goodness and understanding. Certainly, a person who thinks of no one but herself would not meet these requirements. Admiration of oneself can be the most abominable characteristic of a person.

A feeling of superiority in all fields could cover our disliked Miss Asterbuilt. Surely there is no demand for people with ideas of superiority.

After using Miss Asterbuilt as an example of a self-admirer, we should consider her personality and if there is any relation to hers and ours, we should adapt ourselves to our way of life with an idea to better our personalities.

Conceit will not make one have a better understanding in any situation but will only lower one's chances of being an all-round person.

We Salute You—

By THAD PITT

People may gossip, and whisper, and talk, but may it never be rumored that the Valdosta State College Senior Class of Nineteen Hundred and Fifty-One did not have an inspiring vacation at Miami Beach, Florida. If you hear any remarks to that effect, correct them immediately. We had argued, fought and bled over our destination, originally Cuba, but when we found that we could not finance that exploit, we set about finding a place suitable to the greatest number of people, for the most sensible prices. We decided to grace Miami with our presence, and although it took us quite a while to overcome the disappointment of our Cuba defeat, we began to feel excitement crawling over us like a plague as the time grew short. We realized that we could not contribute our lack of funds to any concrete evidence. We all had worked, perhaps not as slavishly as another class might, or maybe more so, but we wanted a trip, and we got it. Whether our efforts were commendable and completely unified, no one may judge earnestly. We accomplished our goal.

In stating our trip as a goal, I do not mean it materially. Miami was only the first step toward what we desired. Superficially, we aimed for Miami. Inwardly, we desired the abstract. I will elaborate on these two phases of our trip.

As we planned our trip, we thought about things that would be impressive and exciting. We wanted to see new places, eat new food, and absorb facts through person, visual education. We planned to attend the universally known Jai Alai games. We looked for information in the library concerning the best places to eat, to visit, and the tours that would prove worthwhile and entertaining to us. These things were what you expect to get from a vacation. We wanted to swim, to relax, to sunbathe, to play at night, without worrying about a test, but ambling about in a care-free way, wondering what we'd rather do most, then do it.

These things were great. We played, we wandered aimlessly, we ate, and we slept, and we visited. We even forgot for a while that although we were playing the prelude to our last short months together, we had three finals yet to take. We saw everything we'd planned, and a little more. We ate everything we wanted and a little more. Some of us went berserk, and got all the sun we wanted and a little more. We were happy, we hated to leave. Our motto seemed to be, Miami, Place Aux Dames."

The things we needed most, however, were to abstract. We began our Freshman Year in Converse Hall, as a class of ninety-eight girls. Our number has decreased annually, until now we are forty-four. This includes our male members, who were desir-

Committee Chooses Publication Heads

McKEMIE

Under a new system instituted this year at V.S.C. the heads of the campus publications are selected by a Publications Committee. The committee chose Ruth Miller to edit the CAMPUS CANOPY and Keith Dame to be Associate Editor. Blount Trammell is to succeed herself as Business Manager with Virginia Wright as Associate Business Manager. Martha McKemie is to be editor of the PINE CONE. The Associate Editor is Dolores Barry. Betty Collins and Melba Grogan were chosen Business Manager and Associate Business Manager.

Ruth Miller from Pembroke has had much experience in newspaper work. Her father owns and manages a paper, and she was the editor of her high school paper. She has been on the news staff of the CANOPY, and for some time edited the Sportsline column. In addition to her work on the paper she has been an active member of the Sports Club and is a member of the Council. She is also a member of the Math-Science Club and the I.R.C.

Keith Dame, of Valdosta, has also had previous experience working on school papers. He served as Editor of the EMORY SPOKE before transferring to V.S.C. He has been Associate Editor of the CANOPY since his entrance into V.S.C. He is also a member of the IRC.

Blount Trammell of Columbus, has served for the past year as Business Manager of the CANOPY, and was elected to succeed herself. She was on the ad staff of the PINE CONE this year. She is president of the Association for Childhood Education and a member of the ECA committee.

Forty-four girls, living in the same dormitory, eating together day after day, sitting in classes together for four years. We know each other, we had met most of the parents. We liked each other, but something more was needed. That something was what we hoped to find. A unity, and sense of closeness, gained by being together in a strange city. A group traveling together, but as a unit alone, seeking enjoyment together, and finding a sense of pleasure and fulfillment, by better learning each other through activities centered within the group. This was our group, our own Senior Class.

To you who have supported our projects, attended our dances, bought our ten o'clock doughnuts, our Christmas cards, our Greeting cards, we express gratitude. To you we owe much of our pleasure and satisfaction.

Virginia Wright of Valdosta is Social Chairman of the Valdosta Club. She is a member of the English Club, Glee Club, and the Business Club.

Dolores Barry, sophomore from Savannah, transferred from Armstrong College this year. She was recently elected vice-president of the Sports Club. She is also vice-president of the Fine Arts Club. She is a member of the Philharmonic Club, Sophomore Council, and the YWCA Cabinet.

Betty Collins, junior from Adel, who is to serve as Business Manager of the PINE CONE is reporter for the Association for Childhood Education and a member of the B.S.U.

Melba Grogan, junior from Calhoun, transferred to V.S.C. from Montreat College the first of her sophomore year. This year she has been Associate Business Manager of the CAMPUS CANOPY. She is Treasurer of the Business Club, and a member of the Sports Club and the Social Science Club.

These officers were selected from the names which appeared on the nomination sheets which were filled in by the members of the student body. The Publications Committee is made up of the faculty committee on publications and the outgoing heads of the two publications.

Miss Sawyer Reads At Valdosta Club

Some of the most popular works of Lew Sarrett, one of our outstanding present-day Southern poets, were read very graciously by Miss Louise Sawyer at the monthly meeting of the Valdosta Club.

The addition of men students to the club has greatly increased the number and interest in the club, which is primarily a social organization for all day students on the campus and whose purpose is to create a friendly relationship between the dormitory and the day students. Among other social activities during the year, the club planned a party to be held in May honoring the outstanding seniors in the club. Concerning the annual contribution to the Red Cross from the club, the members voted to give a sum from the treasury rather than to give individually.

Softball—
All you good people who didn't get to sports practice last quarter, because your afternoons were filled, listen to me. The V.S.C. Sports Club is offering you a new and grand opportunity for fun and exercise. Softball teams are being organized on the play field on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights immediately after supper. The coaches are: Kappa, Rheda Blackwell; Lambda, Sylvia Zeigler.

If you don't play softball now, then you are expected to sign up for the Rookie softball team. The coaches are: Kappa, Ann Stubbs; Lambda, Mar J Boatwright. Don't worry a second about having to play against the professionals—you won't! Rookie Lambdas play Rookie Kappas for plaque points. You can learn softball and have fun, too, so hurry out and sign for your team.

Aquacade—
Plans are being formatted under the apt supervision of Kappa Ruth Miller and Lambda Luceil Bauer for the all important aquacade. Qualifications will be posted soon. Among which will be the requirement of ten hours in the water. Team may be made by any individual who completes the required number of qualifications and practices and participates in the aquatic performance.

You may remember that the plaque is awarded. The decision, however, is not made until the end of the program. During the evening Kappas and Lambdas make their last stand of the year. The competitive activities are:

- Diving—front Back
jack or swan
one optional
- Medley relay—front crawl
Back crawl
breast stroke
free style
- Form swimming—front crawl
back crawl
Breast stroke
side stroke

If you're aquatically inclined and really want to help your team, then watch and listen for announcements and let's meet at the pool, determined to win.

New Officers—
The installation of the new Sports Club officers will be held down at the pool next Tuesday, April 10. You are not only invited, you are expected to attend. Letter Award—

The Sports Club hopes to be able to present the letters to you hard workers during an assembly program before too very long.

school was as Financial Agent to the Finance Committee of the Board of Trustees of GSWC; with the organization of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia, his title was changed to that of Treasurer, and he was later named Comptroller by the Board.

Mr. Dusenbury originally came to this section from his home in South Carolina. He was connected with a wholesale grocery concern before coming to Valdosta. After moving to Valdosta and before becoming affiliated with the College, he was in the wholesale grocery business and real estate business, and also served as City Clerk for several years.

Mr. Dusenbury has been secretary-terasurer of the local Kiwanis Club for a number of years, and has also served as secretary-treasurer of the Valdosta Country Club. For over twenty years he was a member of the Board of Stewards of the First Methodist Church.

After his retirement, Mr. Dusenbury will make his home with his family in Murrell's Inlet, South Carolina.

that no matter where you sit there is a shadow on your book. Soon a dull ache starts in the cranial region and you realize that if you don't get to a decent light soon, you'll lose what little sight you have left in your poor eyes.

So, gathering up your books, you walk out of the library and back to your little room, resolving that the next time you come to this place you'll bring either a flash light or a candle. Now, you walk slowly back to the dormitory where there may be noise, but at least there's light.

Freshmen Plan Kitchen

By FRANCES CHIAMBERLIN

The Freshman Dormitory Students have designed a plan to help them break from the every day routine; this is a kitchen and lounge in Converse! They are located in the wing near the Business Club Store.

The lounge is a gay pink room with a blue flowered couch and dark blue furniture. In it will be placed card tables, cards, records, and player and radio.

Miss Carter and Mrs. Thomas have graciously consented to teach those Freshmen who wish to learn bridge on Friday night in the lounge. On that night, a committee will make and serve refreshments.

The kitchen is a blue room with white and red furniture. We plan to have red and white curtains and dishes. The hotplates for cooking will be donated by the different students.

The painting and arrangement was done by the Freshman girls. A fine of $.05 will be given to every girl in the rooms before 10:30 if the rooms are left untidy. The rooms will be checked by house counsellors every night at 10:30.

Freshmen may use lounge and kitchen all day and during quiet hoid as long as no unnecessary noise is made and the rooms are left clean.
