THE YOUNG WOMEN CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION FOR 1952-53

Correction

In the last issue of the Canopy the dates given for the summer terms were incorrect. The correct dates are: first term, June 10-July 18; second term, July 21-August 23; third term, August 26-October 18; fourth term, October 21-December 13. The workshops will be held during the first term.

V. S. C. Students To Attend
I. R. C. Conference

Eight I.R.C. members and the faculty advisor plan to attend the Conference of Southeastern International Relations Clubs at Troy State Teachers College, Florida, February 21-23. The main portion of the program will be the workshop, and discussions held by the student representatives. Their topic will be of timely world affairs.

Dr. Emmett Kilpatrick, noted lecturer and traveler, will present a vivid picture of his experience in Africa last winter. In addition, there will be at least one more nationally-known person to speak to the conference.

The entertainment highlight will be a banquet and a musical program. Other entertainment will include a Probable barbecue and shish the Troy Playmakers and an informal dance.

The conference will be attended by approximately 400 delegates from 82 colleges and universities over 8 states.

Those planning to attend from V. S. C. are Marie Bergen, Flor-

Social Calendar

February 21 — Faculty Tea sponsored by the Home Economics Club.

February 22 — Conference sponsored by the Home Economics Club.

The Young Women's Christian Association for 1952-53

The Student Council recommends the I. A. A.

The student council, at their regular monthly meeting, made the following recommendations for the setting of a Men's Athletic Association:

1. The Student Organization Committee of the S.G.A. of V.S.C. be notified of the part of the S.G.A. as the latter may request, in all matters relative to this. Be it resolved: The M.A.A. be composed of a board, composed of:
   a. The President of the College and the Dean of Men. The President or his designee (a female, if a male); or if a female, her appointee who shall be a male Senior student.
   c. The Director of Athletics and a S.G.A. equal S. C. (whenever his title).
   b. The coaches (when appointed to the above) for the several sports and athletic programs for men at V.S.C., other staff or student

Finance Group Allots Student Activity Fund

The following recommendation will be transmitted to the Finance Committee for the distribution of the student activity fund for the above-mentioned activities.

The recommendation was made by the Student Council and will go into effect immediately. It is as follows:

1. Clubs that will make allocations to the student annual, student paper and the art-

Social Calendar

February 21 — Faculty Tea sponsored by the Home Economics Club.

February 22 — Conference sponsored by the Home Economics Club.

The Young Women's Christian Association for 1952-53

The Student Council recommends the I. A. A.

The student council, at their regular monthly meeting, made the following recommendations for the setting of a Men's Athletic Association:

1. The Student Organization Committee of the S.G.A. of V.S.C. be notified of the part of the S.G.A. as the latter may request, in all matters relative to this. Be it resolved: The M.A.A. be composed of a board, composed of:
   a. The President of the College and the Dean of Men. The President or his designee (a female, if a male); or if a female, her appointee who shall be a male Senior student.
   c. The Director of Athletics and a S.G.A. equal S. C. (whenever his title).
   b. The coaches (when appointed to the above) for the several sports and athletic programs for men at V.S.C., other staff or student

Finance Group Allots Student Activity Fund

The following recommendation will be transmitted to the Finance Committee for the distribution of the student activity fund for the above-mentioned activities.

The recommendation was made by the Student Council and will go into effect immediately. It is as follows:

1. Clubs that will make allocations to the student annual, student paper and the art-
PIPE SMOKE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Pipe Smoke

As the winter quarter moves toward its conclusion, I have been looking back on the school year with considerable satisfaction. Our enrollment has continued high and has increased each quarter, while most colleges were having a decline. The student body has been recognized and a satisfactory student government has been set up. For the first time since we have been a college, we now have an opportunity for the development of a real school spirit at Valdosta State College.

The State Fire Marshall has recently inspected our buildings, and the Board of Regents is making special allotments for us to renovate all our buildings and make everything on the campus completely fire safe. We are also trying to beautify the campus in line with the general program of the Board of Regents. A special allotment for re-lawncaping the campus has recently been made by the Board of Regents, and planting is in process now in line with the plans for beautification of the campus drawn by W. C. Pauley Landscape Company of Atlanta.

I should mention also the plans for the boy's dormitory, a new dormitory for the girls. The plans have been approved by the Board of Regents, and the gymnasium plans are rapidly reaching completion. The University System Building Authority does not anticipate too much difficulty in obtaining steel for these buildings. We should see the breaking of ground for at least one of these buildings in the not too distant future.

I am very pleased that the students are pleased with the progress that we are making, and I hope that we will have the continued cooperation of the students in making Valdosta State College one of the leading units in the University System.

Spirit

By MARY JO LOTT

Schools are only what their students make them, and what V. S. does is that we create an active, educational institution.

A student body is a very important and necessary part of any school. Without a student body, a school would lose its identity. Students are the ones who make up the school, and students make up the school spirit. It is what makes a school unique and special.

I have been pleased with the activities and events that have taken place on campus this year. The students have been very active and have shown a real interest in their school.

The Tie That Binds

Have you ever thought about what you value most in your life today—your health, your family, your friends? To me, these are some of the most important things in life. But there are also many other things that we value, such as our school, our community, and our country.

In this column, I will be discussing some of the things that are important to us and how we can value them more. I will also be discussing some of the challenges we face in valuing these things and how we can work to overcome these challenges.

The Right Retort

(Suggestions for “what to say” on a number of academic occasions. Here’s the deal.)

When you are given an objective test: "It doesn't let you express yourself."

When you are given an essay test: “It’s too vague. You don’t know what to write.”

When you are given many minor tests: "Why not have a few big ones?"

When you are asked to study a part of the subject by yourself: "I will not do it."

Three Suggestions (take them for what they are worth)

As a senior about to graduate, I hope, (hope springs eternal, etc.) I feel that you should pass on a few helpful hints, such as:

Don’t break your ex’s heart for money after college life ahead, goldens refers to the long one spends at college; years is self explanatory; and college life unfalsifiable

First, don’t be alarmed if it seems you have to study a great deal, it will pass. It is a stage many young students must endure, but like diagnosis, the disease will be gone in a single class; so for goodness sake don’t be so boorish as to refuse their kindness, take all your cuts. Rolgo to a girl friend of yours, (most of whom have found that its easier to fall on the wrong side) and those who are just completely lost.

Second, love, honor, and obey the faculty. They are fine people and will help you immensely. For example, they have provided you with this lovely school, etc.

Third, never turn down an invitation to join a club; it is the height of good taste. Join at least one or two helpful hints, those that have the school spirit and you could do nothing more enjoyable then going to an exciting club meeting every night. It is a sure cure for boredom.

There are many more hints I would like to pass on, but the paper allows me to write only one note. I will pass out only one more—never fancy yourself a young Joseph Pulitzer and apply for a position on the college newspaper, because job it. It makes you comparable to refusing to kiss your girl friend when she provides mistletoe.

The Tie That Binds

Have you ever thought about what you value most in your life today—your health, your family, your friends? To me, these are some of the most important things in life. But there are also many other things that we value, such as our school, our community, and our country.

In this column, I will be discussing some of the things that are important to us and how we can value them more. I will also be discussing some of the challenges we face in valuing these things and how we can work to overcome these challenges.

The Right Retort

(Suggestions for “what to say” on a number of academic occasions. Here’s the deal.)

When you are given an objective test: "It doesn't let you express yourself."

When you are given an essay test: “It’s too vague. You don’t know what to write.”

When you are given many minor tests: "Why not have a few big ones?"

When you are asked to study a part of the subject by yourself: "I will not do it."

Three Suggestions (take them for what they are worth)

As a senior about to graduate, I hope, (hope springs eternal, etc.) I feel that you should pass on a few helpful hints, such as:

Don’t break your ex’s heart for money after college life ahead, goldens refers to the long one spends at college; years is self explanatory; and college life unfalsifiable

First, don’t be alarmed if it seems you have to study a great deal, it will pass. It is a stage many young students must endure, but like diagnosis, the disease will be gone in a single class; so for goodness sake don’t be so boorish as to refuse their kindness, take all your cuts. Rolgo to a girl friend of yours, (most of whom have found that its easier to fall on the wrong side) and those who are just completely lost.

Second, love, honor, and obey the faculty. They are fine people and will help you immensely. For example, they have provided you with this lovely school, etc.

Third, never turn down an invitation to join a club; it is the height of good taste. Join at least one or two helpful hints, those that have the school spirit and you could do nothing more enjoyable then going to an exciting club meeting every night. It is a sure cure for boredom.

There are many more hints I would like to pass on, but the paper allows me to write only one note. I will pass out only one more—never fancy yourself a young Joseph Pulitzer and apply for a position on the college newspaper, because job it. It makes you comparable to refusing to kiss your girl friend when she provides mistletoe.

The Tie That Binds

Have you ever thought about what you value most in your life today—your health, your family, your friends? To me, these are some of the most important things in life. But there are also many other things that we value, such as our school, our community, and our country.

In this column, I will be discussing some of the things that are important to us and how we can value them more. I will also be discussing some of the challenges we face in valuing these things and how we can work to overcome these challenges.

The Right Retort

(Suggestions for “what to say” on a number of academic occasions. Here’s the deal.)

When you are given an objective test: "It doesn't let you express yourself."

When you are given an essay test: “It’s too vague. You don’t know what to write.”

When you are given many minor tests: "Why not have a few big ones?"

When you are asked to study a part of the subject by yourself: "I will not do it."

Three Suggestions (take them for what they are worth)

As a senior about to graduate, I hope, (hope springs eternal, etc.) I feel that you should pass on a few helpful hints, such as:

Don’t break your ex’s heart for money after college life ahead, goldens refers to the long one spends at college; years is self explanatory; and college life unfalsifiable

First, don’t be alarmed if it seems you have to study a great deal, it will pass. It is a stage many young students must endure, but like diagnosis, the disease will be gone in a single class; so for goodness sake don’t be so boorish as to refuse their kindness, take all your cuts. Rolgo to a girl friend of yours, (most of whom have found that its easier to fall on the wrong side) and those who are just completely lost.

Second, love, honor, and obey the faculty. They are fine people and will help you immensely. For example, they have provided you with this lovely school, etc.

Third, never turn down an invitation to join a club; it is the height of good taste. Join at least one or two helpful hints, those that have the school spirit and you could do nothing more enjoyable then going to an exciting club meeting every night. It is a sure cure for boredom.

There are many more hints I would like to pass on, but the paper allows me to write only one note. I will pass out only one more—never fancy yourself a young Joseph Pulitzer and apply for a position on the college newspaper, because job it. It makes you comparable to refusing to kiss your girl friend when she provides mistletoe.

The Tie That Binds

Have you ever thought about what you value most in your life today—your health, your family, your friends? To me, these are some of the most important things in life. But there are also many other things that we value, such as our school, our community, and our country.

In this column, I will be discussing some of the things that are important to us and how we can value them more. I will also be discussing some of the challenges we face in valuing these things and how we can work to overcome these challenges.

The Right Retort

(Suggestions for “what to say” on a number of academic occasions. Here’s the deal.)

When you are given an objective test: "It doesn't let you express yourself."

When you are given an essay test: “It’s too vague. You don’t know what to write.”

When you are given many minor tests: "Why not have a few big ones?"

When you are asked to study a part of the subject by yourself: "I will not do it."

Three Suggestions (take them for what they are worth)

As a senior about to graduate, I hope, (hope springs eternal, etc.) I feel that you should pass on a few helpful hints, such as:

Don’t break your ex’s heart for money after college life ahead, goldens refers to the long one spends at college; years is self explanatory; and college life unfalsifiable

First, don’t be alarmed if it seems you have to study a great deal, it will pass. It is a stage many young students must endure, but like diagnosis, the disease will be gone in a single class; so for goodness sake don’t be so boorish as to refuse their kindness, take all your cuts. Rolgo to a girl friend of yours, (most of whom have found that its easier to fall on the wrong side) and those who are just completely lost.

Second, love, honor, and obey the faculty. They are fine people and will help you immensely. For example, they have provided you with this lovely school, etc.

Third, never turn down an invitation to join a club; it is the height of good taste. Join at least one or two helpful hints, those that have the school spirit and you could do nothing more enjoyable then going to an exciting club meeting every night. It is a sure cure for boredom.

There are many more hints I would like to pass on, but the paper allows me to write only one note. I will pass out only one more—never fancy yourself a young Joseph Pulitzer and apply for a position on the college newspaper, because job it. It makes you comparable to refusing to kiss your girl friend when she provides mistletoe.
Phaedrus: If you will break the bow if you keep it always stretched

Recipe for relaxation—take the contents of one frothy bottle of Coca-Cola. Delicious, too.

A New Element 'Wo' Discovered

We are met this evening for a discussion of one of the better known elements—long known, but still requiring much careful study.

This element with symbol WO is named Women. There exists a large number of isotopes of this element with atomic weights varying all the way from 95 to 350. We also find numerous allotopic forms — some have attractively shaped crystals while some are definitely amorphous (amorphous means "without form").

Because of the existence of so many allotopic modifications there have been reported a large variety of physical properties which seem to be mutually contradictory and really are not. The only difficulty is that not enough has been done to determine the conditions under which the different modifications flourish. For example, the question of variable mass.

Under proper stimulation with relatively large quantities of carbohydriet (preferably sucrose) mixed with chocolate, fairly wide and dense specimens have been obtained. On the other hand, isolation in a schoolroom may tend to develop monolitic crystals—long and needle-shaped. The taste of this latter form has been determined to be definitely sour, although much more work has been done in verifying the sweet taste of some other varieties.

The color varies from brown to yellowish-white, but a deceptive red surface color has been observed at times. Careful examinations, however, discloses that this surface color (usually red) is foreign matter easily removed by friction.

The hardness depends upon the amount of pressure applied, together with the direction of application of the pressure. This phenomenon is associated with negative phototropism. In other words, the effect of pressure in decreasing the hardness is much greater in the absence of light.

Some specimens have been observed to turn green in the presence of another, similar specimen which has been provided with a new dress.

Chemically, this element is a powerful reducing agent (unicreted), and it is particularly important in the separation of silver and gold. It is also a powerful reducing agent (unicreted). It is recommended that a larger number of chemists take part in the study.

Philosophes

(Dedicated to our Student Teachers)

Good morning, gentlemen. Isn’t it a beautiful day? I really can’t see anything so good or beautiful about it. My head is splitting, I shouldn’t have stayed out last night.

After I called the roll, we’ll have our singing. Please, if you come up and lead the songs, you have a fine, strong voice. (It’s strong, all right. Oh, my poor head.) Let’s not sing the next one quite so loudly. We might disturb the fifth grade class next door. (Or drive me crazy).

Now let’s work the problems on board. Won’t they ever learn quietly to the front. (Did I say of holding them.)

I’ll make a note to get him one for his birthday.

Put everything away now, except paper and pencils. It’s time for spelling. Listen carefully so that we won’t have to repeat the words more than twice. (I know about how they’ll listen. All they are interested in is the recess bell.)

No, Jimmy, the word is not “peeve”. It is “peevish”. You remember from our history lesson yesterday that “peeve” was used by the people at that time. It was the word you didn’t hear, Larry, was it not?

“A lot of the time it’s talent for scrubbing pots instead of holding them.”

Their mothers probably used them for scrubbing pots instead of holding them.

Fold your papers and pass them up at the lunchroom. That new word. You were looking out the window yesterday.)

Teachers, your problem is correct. Jack.

A lot of the time it’s talent for cleaning the floor and count with her fingers, Faye. That is a very bad habit. (A lot of good things we’ve tried at school have failed."

She will look down at the floor and count with her fingers, Faye. That is a very bad habit. (A lot of good things we’ve tried at school have failed."

Good morning, children. Isn’t it more than time we got started?

I forgot mine. I don’t mean that. I was only making fun of the fifth grade class next door. (Or drive me crazy).

Jean, will you come up and lead the discussion of one of the better known elements—long known, but still requiring much careful study.

The maps? Yes. I thought they were there. You have a good memory, Mr. Ellis.

I’m fine, thank you. Would you like to see what she can find out of the recess bell. Al maybe after an hour you will be able to write the names of all the states, now that we are met this evening for a discussion of one of the better known elements—long known, but still requiring much careful study.

But don’t think I don’t know that they are telling the truth. David and his mother really do need a toothbrush.

I’ll make a note to get him one for his birthday. (Or drive me crazy).

Your problem is correct. Jack.

You may sit down. Alice, can you help Tom find his mistake?

You have a fine, strong voice. (It’s strong, all right. Oh, my poor head.)

Oh, my poor head. Let’s not sing the next one quite so loudly. We might disturb the fifth grade class next door. (Or drive me crazy).

I think that they are just waiting for me to go inside. Then they will try to scratch each other’s eyes and run to me with their bleeding noses and woe.

In the course of the discussion of one of the better known elements—long known, but still requiring much careful study.

The maps? Yes. I thought they were there. You have a good memory, Mr. Ellis.

I’m fine, thank you. Would you like to see what she can find out of the recess bell. Almaybe after an hour you will be able to write the names of all the states, now that we are met this evening for a discussion of one of the better known elements—long known, but still requiring much careful study.

But don’t think I don’t know that they are telling the truth. David and his mother really do need a toothbrush.

I’ll make a note to get him one for his birthday. (Or drive me crazy).
I'll Chase Him Until He Catches Me

The great problem of a few (15) of us is in the story of "The right one" but he doesn't appear to know that HE has met the "right one" and that is where trouble begins. Poor Man! He gets so confused, for maybe he does think you're cute or pretty or fun, or amusing, that he could prove to you he is "The One." So out come your favorite new clothes, and your sunniest disposition. So even this doesn't work, what then? A tall blond ephrast-moore and in her calm soft voice says, "Oh, I find it awfully convenient to appear in the same place every time, but I can't be sure in S time are so dumb, they never realize that I am waiting for them or that I quit him to ali ali him, or that I learned to drink coffee 'cause he likes it.

The ideal girl is the versatile one that stays outdoors if HE likes it, indeed HE should like it, which chases him if HE desires a brief run, shy and reticent if HE is aggressive, everyone's pal, motherly, strictly his, or hard to get, which suits his idiosyncrasies, girls, 'where's there's life there's hope' and you can laugh behind your hand 'for he'll never know' just exactly how he got caught.

Sportslight

Soccer, Basketball and Archery

Are you interested? Why not come and try out? You can be sure, you can spare an hour or two each week, and it can be a bit more fun for you. That's all a sportsman club does. Study with the Women's Sports Club and we'll truly like to have you.

Match games were played recently and the Lambdas outslewed the Kappas on the soccer field by a score of 3-0. "Easy money" is the way the Sophomores called it in basketball. Makes it sort of "even-Steven" doesn't it? If you come out and play you might make some new friends for a little fun. That's all in a sports light club does. Study with the Women's Sports Club and we'll truly like to have you.

Tooth Troubles

Yesterday morning, while applying a high polish (Colgate's) to my pearly whites, I began chewing on one of them. It had such a mouthful of gravel, I almost must see to this. Yes, sir! I was making a pretty good mess and anybody with a toothache in your position would have set off a few points for your team.

Piangs are in the making for the annual aquacade to be held the last Wednesday in May and certifying it will be forthcoming in the coming weeks, you are urged to include participation in the aquacade next quarter.

If a water system starts each "he" will come along and see "he's" present. No yelling, for in such cases I always know that "he's" going to be in. He can be dressed in his Sunday best, flighty garments, even in the garden next door. For me, I never do anything right, didn't I, doc?"

"Tsk!" I said. "I must see to this. Yes, sir! I was making a pretty good mess and anybody with a toothache in your position would have set off a few points for your team."

"I assumed the customary dental position. I think the doc was proud of me. I was especially proud of myself and braved it to breakfast."

I was in the aquacade and in due time I was in the Physical Training course and in due time I was in the Physical Training course.