THE CASE AGAINST DRINKING

What's so smart about drinking? What good does it do besides so drenching a person's sense of values that the temporarily forgotten dangers are hidden in a sea of rose-haze?

A person is often prone to look at the negative side of the question and ask, "What's wrong with it?" But before we answer that, let's give another slant. "What good does it do?" The possible answers are rare and even then very vague. "Everybody does it. I want to be one of the gang." Think about this: Is it the hideous fact that puts you down to comply with the crowd. Is it the rules of our culture, the things you've been taught from birth as right or wrong? Alcohol also completely relaxes your right foot. It is so completely relaxed you cannot keep the accelerator of an automobile off the floor. And next, what's wrong with it? If money truly does talk, the alchoholic beverage must pay for social reasons, are you lifting your standards to meet theirs or are you dragging yourself down to comply with the crowd.

What's more important to you, your own moral standards or the rules of our culture? The things you've been taught from birth as right or wrong? Alcohol also completely relaxes your right foot. It is so completely relaxed you cannot keep the accelerator of an automobile off the floor. And next, what is that the alcoholic beverage does not pay for? The fact that it relaxes so completely, that you forget not only your troubles but also the mores of our culture, the things you've been taught from birth as right or wrong.

The whole process is not only unfortunate to the individual but the freshman, but also the student here a vital part of the collegiate activities. The use of the word "rat" is particularly at an art student's expense. For putting your hand on the seat at the front, for the chair is now made available. "Rat Day Returns..." Jan 23, 1966, "Boy, those familiar RatDay scenes have reappeared this year. This morning as girls staggered sleepy headed from sleep and light of dawn, they were at sight of delectably sprayed with the most delicious, expressive, vivid, attractive,并 which is supposed to the rats. If this school were a military academy, there might be a pur- mountain of boys. This is a serious matter.

Already this year, one has been attempted, and they have failed. Idiotic atrocities have been wit- such a condition might upset the whole school's program. The word is not only, but the word is not only. The practice known as "ratting, is one of the most interesting and college presidents hail the scholarship fund feature of the competition as a contribution to higher education. The con- test closes October 25.

As contestants list in order of the six articles which they consider most interesting in the October issue of the magazine, the art is of special interest to journalism students and teachers.

First prize is $5,000 in cash with another $5,000 to the scholarship fund of the winner's college. Second prize is $3,000 and an equal amount to the winner's scholarship fund. There are ten $500 cash prizes. For all things, there are also 100 prizes of $10 in book credit from local college book stores. The best entry from each college will receive $10 additional book credit.

The contest is open to only students in the United States. On blanks available at college book stores, students may write their ideas in any combination of the six articles which they consider most interesting in the current Reader's Digest. Those with listings closest to the results of Digest readers will receive the prizes.

Entries must be postmarked before October 25 and addressed to the Reader's Digest Contest, Box 140, Great Neck, L. I., New York.

"Advice to Freshmen," April 2, 1949: "Take good grades while you can."

The second year is tougher and you can see that same prof that you have now.

"Rat Day Returns..." Jan 23, 1966: "Boy, those familiar RatDay scenes have reappeared this year. This morning as girls staggered sleepy headed from sleep and light of dawn, they were at sight of delectably sprayed with the most delicious, expressive, vivid, attractive..."

"For a thousand years we have been arguing whether we are on the right track to reaching that forseable and elusive land called Valdosta. Some would try to call the bare facts, my friends. This is a case against excessive rating. If the facts for this practice can be submitted that will bring them back to the land."

"There are students who will violently oppose this law and that's the trouble. Some students have been especially critical. They cannot give you this much."

My Impressions of America
And the College Youth Here

by Lief Osnarheim

The impression I have of all the inhabitants here came from the literature, school books and not at all the movie shows. And so I left Norway. I will in the following try to give you my honest opinion in some points.

I have been with the very friendly and informal way used among the people here. I think all students, from what part of the world they come, at once will feel at home here in the friendly atmosphere at Valdosta State College.

A thing I was very astonished to note here was the kindness of all the boys and girls toward each other. I think Norwegians must have passed the age of twenty one or twenty-two before they give attention to girls in that way. (And this politeness should of course you girls appreciate.)

A third thing I will mention before I will say is that even the things I don't like so much, is that I am very pleased to see how common it is among the youth here to go to church. I think the different churches here in your country that we do in Europe. I hope the same thing will be one of the things I will bring with me back from the year in Georgia. We all need something to believe in, and young people in our world so full of en- strangement and I think little more of the Christian spirit will raise hope of peace on earth.

Coming to the other side of the status, I must say that you college youth can look a little more at the things you will take with you when you drop all sorts of bottles and paper and cigarettes on the floor, expecting another to take it up. I have seen someone drop a knife or spoon in the dining-hall and only take a new one without thinking of picking it up. And of course, the next in line kicks it under the counter.

A question I have been asked several times during my stay here is: 'How do the girls feel here?' And from the first day at college here in Valdosta I did understand that this is a very important question with the girls. How do you feel here; and with the following little notice:

The girls here are not as common as you imagine nor as married. Don't you think a little more of personal matters and fashion would be good.
