

Only At VSC— A Tribute To Wonderfulness

Students at Valdosta State College have much for which to be thankful.

Only at VSC....

...can a student be sure of a quiet dorm on weekends -- extremely conducive to good studying -- because almost everyone has gone home.

...can a student get an Ace Bandage for $8.00 per quarter.

...there is a well-organized, quick-moving, non-traumatic registration day.

...can a student get to know the administrative officials on a first-name basis.

...can a student read the Campus Comedy -- filled with news covering all facets of life at VSC, features of great campus interest, and editorials of tremendous impact.

...there is a friendly, smiling security force.

...there is a library staff which cannot wait to help students with any research problem.

...can a student enjoy an excitingly well-rounded social life. ...there is modern, spacious, punctual transportation to North Campus.

...there is a new parking lot being built a million miles from civilization.

SDS students rally to their leader

Student Demonstration Bombs Out, Fizzles, Etc.

A student take-over of the administration fizzled out yesterday as the SDS (Students For a Dogmatic Society) organization confusedly divided between Nethers and Western academic buildings.

The conflict in opinions concerned which building to demonstrate in. Advocates for Nethers Hall argued that the president, comptroller, and security forces were located in that building, while Western proponents pointed out that the dean of students and propaganda college relations departments were situated there.

A small sect supported a take-over of Ounce Hall, saying that "the building is farthest away from the security and police forces, so that we will have more time in which to act before being arrested." Interested in their group's welfare, the Ounce Hall leader stated, "It's also nearest the hospital, and you know that in serious cases, time always counts."

A list of grievances had been drawn up by the organization factions. Complaints included: cafeteria food ("They cook just like my little sister"), parking spaces ("We need a triple-decker parking lot built on top of the Student Union"), curfew ("There are so many things to do in Valdosta after one o'clock that we need an extended curfew") and student apathy ("Students are so apathetic that they don't even get mad at being called apathetic.")

The SDS, which had formerly tried to stop a basketball game in the gym only to discover it was an away-game that night, states that its purpose is to force the administration to accept well-planned student proposals.

President Wipes Out Curfew With Males To Be Subjected

In an attempt to appease the feminine half of the VSC student body, the administration yesterday announced a change in the curfew policy.

"Beginning summer quarter," according to S. Wally Martini, president, "curfew hours for women will be eliminated. We feel that our present policy is extremely outdated, and we were finally able to convince the Board of Regents that curfew should be abolished."

The president went on to explain that certain stipulations had to be agreed to before the Board would consent to the change in curfew policy.

"We had to agree to set a curfew hour for male students," stated the president.

"We realize that there will be some outrage voiced by the male populace, but we feel that the new policy is quite reasonable," said Dr. Martini, dryly.

"The new policy is much more lenient than the one to which female students were previously subjected," he concluded.

Curfew hours for male students during the week are set for 12:45. Men must be in the dorm by 2:30 on weekends.

It is urged that when a man has a date with one of the girls living in a residence hall, that she see him to his dormitory in order to cut down on the risk him being late.

Concerning sign-outs, males will be asked to fill out the name of their companion, but destination will remain optional. Weekend sign-out is mandatory.

To prevent men from leaving the dorm without signing out, all doors except the lobby entrance will be closed at dusk.

Failure to sign out or breaking of curfew will result in being campused one to five nights. The new regulations will be strictly enforced.

According to Randy Dollarton, house father of Bruise Hall, "We will try to be as understanding as possible until the men get accustomed to the new rules."

Giant Leaf Engulfs Campus

The Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia in cahoots with the Georgia General Assembly and the Lowndes County Roads Department have approved a 14.3 mile clover-leaf bridge to be constructed on the campus of VSC.

The bridge, two and a half tiers of solid concrete, will connect Nethers Avenue, Parking Lot Boulevard, North and South Patterson Street and Slater Drive.

The "clover-leaf" is expected to ease the problems of heavy traffic between classes at VSC and especially on the week ends when the students are plentiful on campus.

Dr. Wally Martini, president of VSC, said that "building the 'clover-leaf' is the most progressive event made by the college since the planting of the shrubs and trees on campus. It really shows that VSC is constantly growing and we must, if we are to survive in Lowndes County, construct new facilities to meet the new growth."

Ground breaking ceremonies will be held July 4 with the VSC band and glee club participating. To be on hand at the ceremony, Lester Maddox, George Wallace, Richard Nixon, and Dean Martin are expected.

The climax is expected to be reached when Dr. Wally Martini, President of VSC, digs the first shovel of dirt and Dean Martincasts an empty champagne bottle (the sign of progress in modern America) into the freshly dug hole while the VSC Glee Club sings "Bottoms Up," accompanied by the VSC Band.

Completion of the project is expected to be completed by January 1973. The "clover-leaf" will be designed and built by Solestes, Hoffa, and Maddox Architectural and Construction Incorporated of Atlanta.

Contest Starts To Christen Stink Creek

In an effort to stimulate interest in the beauty spots on the Valdosta State College campus, a campaign has begun to name the creek which runs through the campus between Loudest Hall and the new Fine Arts Building.

Several suggestions have already been submitted. Among the first are labels such as "Refuse Run" and "Stink Creek." Also mentioned was "Stagnant Springs."

Last year Governor Maddox visited VSC to dedicate the bridge over the unnamed creek. "We feel that through giving distinctive names to natural beauty spots on campus, such as was done with the Chameleon Trail," said Miss Wishful Thinking of the VSC Improvement Committee, "we can arouse more interest in the college."

Grant revoked

Termite Plague Infests Library; Head Librarian Sobs Over Loss

The Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia has repealed the grant of $2.4 million to have been used by Valdosta State College in constructing a new library.

The repeal came today following the decision that Valdosta State College had enough library room after reviewing the case of the Termitic Plague (termites) on the campus.

Three weeks ago, the plague was discovered on the Valdosta State College campus in the Library, Book-Store, and the Lunch-room.

More than $15,000 worth of books, magazines, chairs, tables, desks, and pencils were destroyed by the plague.

The entire reference room was cleared by the invasion. Included in the many books destroyed were a complete set of Master-plots of Magill that were on reserve, a set of World Book Encyclopedia, a two volume set of the Japanese Dictionary of Slang, a lost Playboy Magazine, and many other valuable and treasured books belonging to Valdosta State College.

The plague spread to the bookstore, where it destroyed the entire stock. From there, it reached the lunchroom, where it stopped for some unknown reason.

The Termitic Plague was treated by Valdosta's Orkin, Getz, Black Flag, and two bottles of Real Kill. The mystery behind the end to the plague in the VSC dining hall is under comprehensive study by the department of biology, under the chairmanship of Drs. Cheesecloth and Bonnell.

Dr. Wally Martini, VSC president, commented on the plague, "VSC has indeed lost a great deal. The library was the backbone of the college and the reference room was the back bone of the library. Now that they are both destroyed, the college has no backbone at all."

"The loss of the bookstore is a complete disaster," he continued, "for it was the New York Stock Exchange of Valdosta State."

"We have turned the investigation into the reasons for the death of the plague carriers in the lunchroom over to the department of biology."

"I am sure that with the able assistance of Dr. Cheesecloth and Dr. Bonnell, that an autopsy of the dead termites in the lunchroom will reveal the solution," he said.

"I, like the other members of the college, believe that Valdosta State College will heal from its wounds eventually. We have Orkin Company donating the money required for the study of the plague's death in the lunchroom in exchange for the copyright on the cause of death."

Dr. Martini further said that when things became settled, he would ask that the money be returned to VSC for the restocking of the bookstore.

Miss Hara Hogsbit, head librarian at VSC spoke these words with tears in her eyes, "VSC as well as myself have suffered a great loss in this disaster. This library has been my home for the last fifty years and now I have nothing."

"My reference room, my tables and table cloths, chairs, my desk, my wooden shoes, and a leg off my easy chair are now all gone," she sobbed.

Directors Push Strictness Inside New Dormitories

The new house directors for the residence halls on the VSC campus have been selected.

Lagging and Jaja Halls are privileged to be directed by Mrs. Cumin Early of Mouseton, Georgia, and Mrs. Curr Few of Stinkley, Florida.

Bruise Hall, following the resignation of Johnny Silver after a hushed-up affair concerning the cooking and condensation of a grain product in the dorm will be ruled by Mr. Restrict Ted Moore, who states that "hourly room-check will be held and that

EDITORIAL POLICY

We refuse to accept responsibility for anything in this paper and will deny under oath that we ever said it.

This scurrilous publication appears only on April Fool's Day and is not to be believed, just enjoyed or tolerated. All conscience-stricken readers are reminded that even if the shoe fits, it is not necessary to try it on in front of an audience.

Organ Floats Down Creek ; Dorm Sinks to Foundation

Construction has been delayed on the two new residence halls and the Fine Arts Building.

The halt was called when it became apparent that the dorms were sinking and the basement of the Arts Building was being filled with water.

"Due to a base of lime-substrate," reported the contractor, "parts of the dorms are sinking, since the foundations and construction are too heavy to be supported."

Cracks have appeared in the ceiling and walls of the dorms, allowing leaks to develop.

"There are several things we can do," says VSC President S. Wally Martini. "We can publicize the construction and display it to tourists as a sort of Leaning Tower of Pisa."

"Or we can patch up the cracks," he continued, "and let the girls move in." "The co-eds have had it easy since the school was founded. Let them suffer a little, like the guys in Burrow Hall."

The Fine Arts Building, which was supposed to have been completed two years ago, will not be opened again this year.

The basement, which housed the elevator-constructed pipe organ, has been flooded from the nearby polluted stream.

Feet of stagnant water continue to rise, even though a machine is industriously hand-pumped by dedicated construction workers, who are being paid time-and-a-half overtime wage to empty the area.

The basement is the foundation for a magnificent 200 piece pipe organ, which is elevated during specific times to the auditorium above.

If the current situation cannot be corrected, an in-door swimming pool might be created. President Martini says, "We can then offer swimming courses in the winter, also. Of course, students will have the pre-requisite of a typhoid shot before enrolling for the course."

the quiet hours will be extended and strictly enforced."

The new men's hall, currently designated as "x," will be directed by Mr. I. Ron Hand after its completion. Until occupancy of the residence hall, Mr. I. Ron Hand will assist Mr. Restrict Ted Moore in administering Bruise Hall.

Constructors Deflower Virgins On Campus

When VSC was chartered in 1492, it had a virgin population of several thousand.

However, as soon as the college grew in number of students, construction of new administrative buildings, dorms, and classroom buildings required the destruction of many long-leaved pinos. The virgin population of pine timber now numbers only a few hundred.

As more buildings are built to accommodate the growing student body, more virgin pinos will be sacrificed.

The Valdosta Board of Moral Values strongly opposes this destruction. "In this age of moral decay and corrupt, decadent society," declares the Board, "every virgin must be saved - be it human, animal; or pine tree."

The Board gained prominence last fall during its regional drive of scrubbing bathrooms and fences clean of graffiti.

Poll Uncovers Startling Truths

A poll was conducted recently at the Valdosta State campus. The question asked was "What do you think should be done to solve the problem of apathy at VSC?"

Some of the responses included: "I don't know what apathy means. Could I try another question?"

"Apathy is the backbone of the American College system."

"If we quit being apathetic, we would be the Campus Comedy duo by artist editorials about?"

"Cut down on the size of the savings in the cafeteria. No one can be apathetic on an empty stomach."

"Hold rallies! Invite rival schools people aware that they are being trampled upon. Awake the masses!"

"It should give the SGA a sense of pride to know that it has run the school without any support."

Mystery Shrouds Registration With Looming Lines, Advisors

Let me tell you about registration for the spring quarter. Spring, when a young man's fancy becomes grim determination to get the classes he needs to avoid getting a Laird Fellowship. Spring, when a young lady's sole determination becomes her holding her place in line, to avoid getting completely knocked out of it.

Let me tell you about that stood out, THE ADVISORS, who know all there is to know about the various classes and times. Further investigation shows that their capacity is almost parallel to those white sheets posted in Nuthers and Western Hall. (For all we know, those stiff white sheets may be all that there is holding Western Hall up.) Unfortunately, that lovely myth about their knowledge being infinite is just myth, especially on this special day.

Let me tell you about the cardiac blue, green, pink, yellow, all spring colors. (Isn't that nice.) These cards, be they blue, green, or whatever, have legal

They get lost; they wander into the wrong envelopes, they are never willing to come out to be given to the people at the tables.

They are also very sensitive; they must not be folded, splatted, mutilated, or chilled.

Let me tell you about the lines. For some undetermined reason they grow forever longer, not shorter like lines at the movies or the water fountains of the world.

Perhaps this is because of this unique growth pattern, or something, that they are always larger at the end where the action is (or is supposed to be.) Now, let me tell you the one truth that keeps us all from giving up: "They also serve who only stand and wait." (Tell that to the discouraged and down-trodden.)

Construction covered illegal operation

"Do you mean 'Housebreaking 204' is already closed out?"

Dorm Hides Illegal Activity

Federal agents today destroyed the very large and very illegal liquor operations that had been so well hidden for so long by the construction of the new high-rise dorms.

Agents reported they smashed several 5000 gallon still pots filled to near capacity with high-grade mash, and that they have seized a vast collection of distilling equipment.

Disclosure was close to impossible because of the clever concealment by some of Valdosta's happiest builders.

Reactions were many and varied in nature. Several of the good people of Valdosta were proudly shocked when they stood on the live wires torn loose during the destruction.

Many, many more were sadly disappointed, this shown by collections of jugs and bottles, all sad and empty, left behind trees and under axed bushes, when their owners realized what had taken place.

Still others were very put out of the building, out of the operation and their jobs, while others were forced to exchange their latest hang-up for a while of a hangover.

Suspicion was first aroused when the building itself took on strange appearances, such as drawn blinds, but no windows, workers scurrying to work, and the good-natured gang that always seemed to be there. More exact information is expected following the conclusion of the investigation.

Due investigation will also be given the rumors of the bath tub operation on the second story of the same building and the Jack Daniels process under the supervision of the construction engineer, "Black Jac," in the new Flair Arts building. There is also the question of the list of names of the girls who contracted, lock, stock, and barrel, the major operation in the dormitory.

Student Lives To Tell Story

by Urs A. Phool

Have you visited Cuba lately? They say the island is becoming more attractive to tourists, especially the species involuntarily after spring holidays, on a return flight from my home in Rhode Island to Jacksonville, I had occasion to be one of those reluctant passengers. This is a personal account of the entire experience of my unexpected journey to Cuba.

On March 22 I departed from Green Airport in Rhode Island. Jacksonville was my destination only an intermediate stop at Kennedy Airport in New York.

Upon arriving at Kennedy, we, the continuing passengers, were told to stay on the plane, for we would be detained only as long as it took to board new passengers.

As I watched these new passengers (the price for admission was $100) board the plane, I saw with a full heart soaring into the sky. I was with a familiar crew on the boat, I saw the plane, I saw the boat, and that was that.

name was Vidal. After a short wait, we were on our way again.

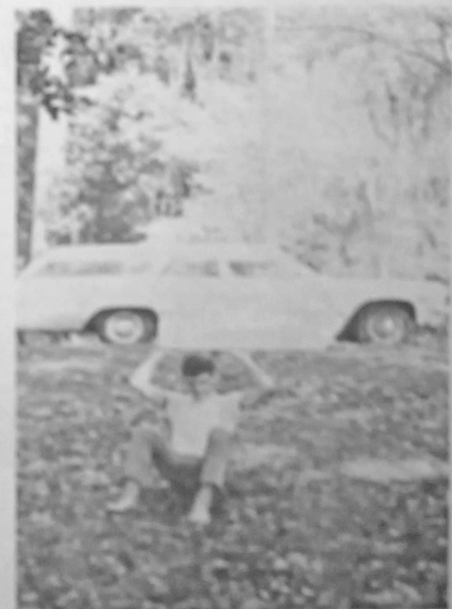

The plane was leaving the Georgia - Florida border when Vidal suddenly seized one of the stewards and broke into the cockpit ordering the pilot to set a course for Cuba.

Mixed feelings were expressed by the new involuntary passengers when the Captain announced our new destination. Some looked surprised, as if what was happening was not real, some showed fear in their blank expressions, and some, the adventurous, seemed to be overjoyed with the reality of seeing Cuba.

We landed on the island some hours later. The Cubans, contrary to popular opinion, were very hospitable. We were provided with rooms and other necessities. Later we were taken on a guided tour of the island. We were not allowed to return to the US until morning.

As the plane departed us from the island of Cuba, I looked out my window and hoped that my first visit to Cuba would also be my last.

Security Pile Up During Chase Of Racing Car

Student patrolmen at VSC were kept busy Monday night as they attempted to stop a student insisting on racing through campus in an unmuffled car.

When Security Patrolman Smith tried to flag the car over to the side of the road, the driver waved and kept going.

Smith radioed Patrolman Jones to stop the driver as he exited the campus behind the gym. Jones also failed to stop the car.

The car, identified as a "Soup-ed-up VW," turned right on Oak Street and was spotted by Patrolman Brown a few minutes later entering the one-way road next to the VSC library.

Brown radioed a full-force alert to block all entrances and exits of the college in order to stop the car.

All roads were blocked and the driver was surrounded by security cars behind Nethers Hall.

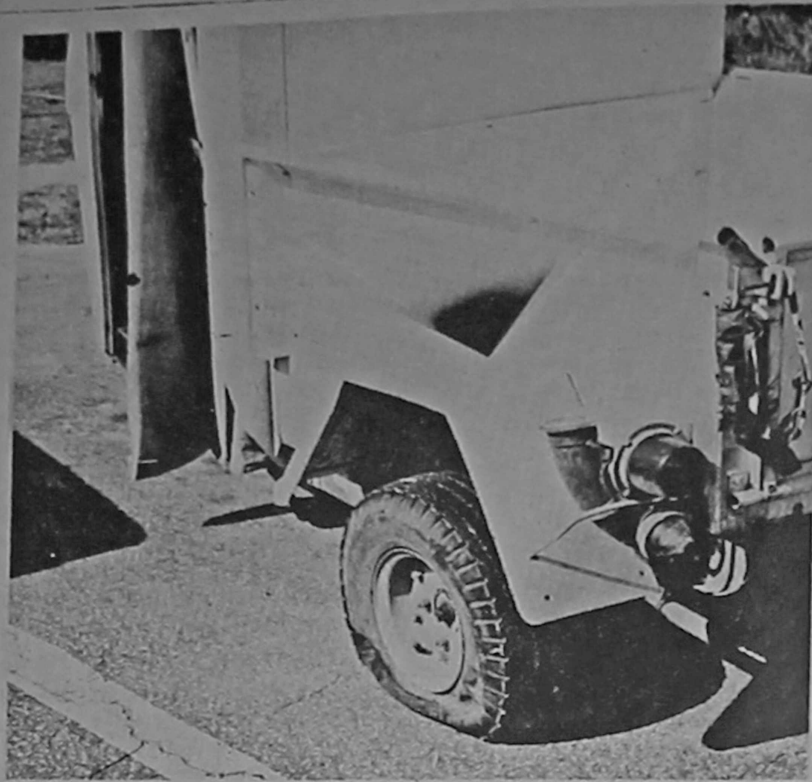

The driver halted his car and made no attempt to escape.

"I can tell when I'm licked; I ain't no dummy," he was reported as saying.

The unidentified driver was given a warning by the security force. As it drove away, the VW sideswiped two patrol cars and raced off campus.

The security patrol was forced to report a six-car pile-up when the patrolmen jumped in their cars to apprehend the driver. All six men apparently tried to take off down the same road at the same time to chase the VW.

No injuries were reported, but the patrol cars suffered slight damage and the VW got away.

Morale Remains High In Spite Of Disgraceful Season

The VSC Revels, for the eighth time in the past nine years, have broken records for their performance in a 0-17 season.

"Even though the guys have not won a single game this year," reports Coach Mellow, "team morale and spirit is high."

"We could have won some games this year," asserted Assistant Coach Dominoe, "if we hadn't had to forfeit a couple of games because the team was late from a pre-game party."

"After all," he continued, "the guys had to see who would come out of the cake."

Petered Out, a 8'2" sophomore from Gangsville, N.Y., was the pre-season favored forward, but bungled the first three games by running into the basket too often.

His tremendously long arms, able to reach the goal from half-court, also caused trouble. They were constantly being tripped on the floor and tripping other players by resting on the court. He thus fouled out of the first ten games.

John Tripper, another pre-season favorite starter, has had his troubles this year. Unable to stay off the floor in a prone position, he suffered several brain concussions, resulting in severe damage to his vision and range perception.

On the GIAC pre-season, the Revels were rated no better than fourteenth, although only eleven teams were entered in the GIAC competition.

Financial Director Awards Scholarship To Self-Skips Town

A new scholarship has been given to VSC, donated by Lesser Mad Ox following the dedication of the school's new maintenance building to him, according to VSC President S. Wally Martini in an announcement released a long time ago but just now read from all the natives flooding the paper.

The scholarship, to cover all tuition, room, and board payments, also covers expenses on trips during the holidays and weekends.

The first recipient of the award, Mr. Gregarious Bass, former financial aid director who resigned after allotting himself the award and announcing that he was going to begin work on his doctorate, was not available for comment as he was "vacationing in Bermuda under the direction of the scholarship."

The maintenance building, described as one of "the newest and finest and most complete in the state," will house the new hydro-electric plant to be built on the banks of the creek behind Loudest Hall. It will utilize the flood waters that rage down the gully whenever it rains, storing electricity in case of a power blackout.

the Yellow Cab Company.

Mr. Schwartz is considered an authority in the field of long-distance produce hauling.

"As in the past," said VSC's Martini "we have tried to obtain a speaker who is capable of lighting fires under students."

Mr. Schwartz served briefly as a flamethrower assistant in the Everglades during the Korean War.

Graduation ceremonies this year will be held at the Farmer's Market on the outskirts of Valdosta following sunrise ceremonies at the O. B. Dickerson Cabbage Farm.

S.G.A. President, David Ratfink, expressed mild disappointment in the selection saying, "We had hoped to get the Lettermen, but you can't win them all. Mr. Schwartz has had numerous affiliations with some of America's most respected citizens. I understand he once helped Buck Owens change a flat tire."

The entire community is expected to turn out to welcome Mr. Schwartz at the Pure Oil Truck Stop the day before Graduation Exercises.

The topic of Mr. Swartz's Graduation Address will be "Careers and Cantaloupes."
