

CHANCELLOR OPENS VSC YEAR

Chides Lack Of Humor

University System of Georgia Chancellor George L. Simpson Jr. told VSC students last week at the 1970 Convocation that the older generation has "both lived through and caused" more change than any other generation, and that what concerned them today is the lack of humor of today's youth.

Referring to the generation gap, Chancellor Simpson said the older generation wrote the book. It is the older generation, more than others, he said, which cut its ties with their parents.

Many young people may not like this, he said, but added it's what happened. He defined the Gap as nothing new and perhaps healthy.

He also claimed much more technological change occurred during the time of his generation, before 1955, than has occurred since.

What is going on today is only the frosting on the basic change, he said which he said was "where the action was." The change then, he added, brought the generations into considerable generational conflict between a fading agriculture economy and an industrial one.

The older generation had to talk their parents into changing methods of farming, he said, and into consolidation of schools, and into buying cars.

But the difference, according to the Chancellor, was that then the conflict between the generations was on an individual basis. They were not, he said, on a mass basis, or stylized, or conforming.

The changes then, he added, were because of necessity, because people had to eat.

The older generation also had the problem of world order, Chancellor Simpson said, and added that they were raised on the idea that we shouldn't get involved in world conflict.

Through all this, Simpson said, the older generation has learned enough to know that moralizing and intensity is not enough.

"They learned that you have to find the humor in what you're doing," he said, and that somehow the younger generation, in not recognizing this, has missed a certain amount of depth and maturity.

VSC REGISTERS 1700 CARS

A total of 1,700 cars have been registered for students, faculty, and VSC employees this quarter, according to Colonel J.P. Hunnicutt, chief of security. Col. Hunnicutt said the number of cars registered totals a "couple of hundred" more than the number registered last year.

Col. Hunnicutt said the 88 space Hopper Hall parking lot has been turned completely back over to students this quarter, after having been partially used as a reserved parking lot for faculty for much of spring quarter.

The closing of the 56-space parking section during construction of the Nevins addition of Spring Quarter made the partial faculty take over of the Hopper Lot necessary during that quarter, Col. Hunnicutt said.

A number of parking spaces for both students and faculty on the west side of the library were also closed summer quarter, Col. Hunnicutt said. The reason, he said, was to clear up a certain amount of traffic congestion in the area, and protect cars from falling pine limbs during heavy winds, and to protect several steam pipes in the area from cars.

A 40-space portion of the parking lot north of West Hall is to be opened to students using the library in the near future, he said.

Col. Hunnicutt said students have cooperated excellently with security concerning the 30-minute limit on parking in the Hopper Hall lot and the 15-minute mail pickup limit on the seven parking spaces directly in front of the student union building, which were opened to student use beginning this quarter.

"Traffic here is in better condition here than it has been in five years," Col. Hunnicutt said, and added that security has received a favorable response from students for the improved traffic control this year.

"I want to thank the students representing the Interfraternity Council for their help during orientation and the opening of the dorms," Col. Hunnicutt said.

"I'm not staffed enough to have done the job without their help," he said.

The 1970 Fall Convocation last Tuesday officially opened the quarter with messages from University System of Georgia Chancellor George L. Simpson, Jr., Student Government Association President Karen Luke, and James L. Thornton, Chairman of the Faculty Affairs Committee.

VSC President S. Walter Martin introduced the speakers for the program, which also included recognition of the President's Freshmen Scholars of 1969-70.

President Martin introduced Chancellor Simpson, who spoke on the generation gap (see story, page 1), as the "most responsible and influential person" in the University System. While the Chancellor keeps up with VSC through written and telephoned reports, the president said, "it's good to have him here."

Chancellor Simpson said Valdosta was becoming one of the jewels of the system, and added that to graduate from VSC will be something to think of with pride.

SGA President Luke called upon students, faculty and administration to bolster up the organizations structure with work and urged that the phrase "lines of communication" be made more than a phrase.

She said many advances have been made by students in recent quarters. Students are now better represented than ever before, she said, and can do something about common problems if students will work to solve them.

Representing the faculty, Prof. Thornton announced the Fall Quarter Faculty Forum for Oct. 15 in the Little Theatre of Whitehead Auditorium. In response to Miss Luke's Referral to "lines of communication," he asked all segments of the college faculty and administration will be represented.

Academic Dean Wade Pafford introduced the Freshmen Scholars as the "best that we have." Their qualifications, he said, include a minimum grade point average of 3.5, good standing at Valdosta State College, and endorsement by the president.

VSC Employs First Black Faculty Member

Louis E. Dunbar, 24, a native of Savannah and a graduate of Atlanta University, joined Valdosta State College this fall as the institution's first Black faculty member. The announcement was made by VSC President S. Walter Martin, following approval by the Board of Regents.

Dr. Martin said Mr. Dunbar will be an assistant professor in the School of Education.

Dr. Ray Cleere, Dean of the School of Education, said, "Mr. Dunbar's primary responsibility will be to work closely with the College Library in development of a campus-wide audio-visual and teaching materials center. He will also serve as an instructor in the use of basic audio-visual equipment and education materials.

"He has completed his masters work at Atlanta University which offers one of the finest programs of this type anywhere in the Southeast. This back

Dr. Cleere also said it is his hope that Mr. Dunbar's work at VSC will provide a source of ready information for public schools, as they move toward more involvement with media in their instructional programs.

Following graduation from Sol. C. Johnson High School in Savannah, Mr. Dunbar received his A.B. degree in modern language and education from Talladega College. He has recently completed the M.S. in Library

Blackberry Wine Is Still Fermenting

by Iris Dominey

"Blackberry Wine" has now sold over 250 copies of the summer issue, according to Bill Fuller, contributor to the literary quarterly and member of the English faculty at VSC.

Fuller went on to explain that the rate of sales has been fairly steady since the summer issue began circulation with copies being sold in Columbus, Albany, and Valdosta.

"Blackberry Wine" is published every quarter by five members of the English faculty including Dr. C. Trent Busch, Sam Cunningham, Dr. Marvin Evans, Bill Fuller, and Raymond Register.

The magazine is compiled mostly of poetry with one short story in each of the two previous publications. Clason Kyle, writer for the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer, has described the magazine as "a literary endeavor that is singular in the state of Georgia and perhaps rare in the nation, i.e., a faculty, not a student, literary magazine."

The editors-contributors have appeared on Albany and Columbus television stations and articles concerning the magazine have been published in several local newspapers. The College Union Board presented the Blackberry Wine group in two programs during the summer quarter.

The writers of the magazine are presently reviewing their poetry for the fall issue which will appear in December. Remaining copies of the summer issue are on sale in the bookstore.

Daniels Named Head Of New VSC School

James D. Daniels, assistant professor of history at Valdosta State College since 1968 was recently named by the Board of Regents as the first dean of the institution's new School of Arts and Sciences. The announcement was made by Valdosta State College President S. Walter Martin.

The School of Arts and Sciences is a segment of the newly reorganized academic structure at Valdosta State, which became effective July 1 of this year. According to President Martin, elevation of Dr. Daniels to the deanship places him in the important position to assist department heads in continued and further development of the academic programs of all departments in the School of Arts and Sciences, which includes the Departments of Biology, Chemistry, English, Mathematics, Modern Foreign Languages, Physics, Philosophy, History and Political Science, Geology and Sociology.

"Dr. Daniels is recognized as an outstanding educator, as well as a most personable and dedicated gentleman," Dr. Martin said. "He brings to his new position an excellent background of good teaching and administrative experience, and will capable lead the School of Arts and Sciences to academic excellence in all areas."

"Valdosta State College has changed in recent years so that it is now a multi-purpose college, providing a broad program of service for this region. It is for this reason that we have recently moved into the new academic reorganization, so that we may continue to provide even more quality programs in our future growth and development. Dr. Daniels will play an important role in this exciting challenge to our institution."

A native of Harmony, N.C., Dr. Daniels, age 34, holds the A.B. degree from Davidson College, and the M.A. and Ph. D. degrees from the University of North Carolina. History was his major field.

A veteran, Dr. Daniels was a lieutenant in the U.S. Army from 1958 to 1960. From 1961 to 1965, he was a history faculty member at Hargrave Military Academy, Chatham, Va., where he also served as a coach, chairman of the Department of Social Studies and Summer School Dean of Students. Upon completion of his doctorate, he joined Valdosta State College.

He is a member of the Southern Historical Association, Organization of American Historians, the Valdosta Boys' Club board of directors, the Valdosta Junior High School Guidance Council and the First Presbyterian Church. He is listed in the Directory of American Scholars, and is a frequent public speaker in historical religious and higher education areas.

Dr. Daniels is married to the former Marie Brown of Statesville, N.C. and they are the parents of three children, Chris, 10; Greg, eight; and Susan, one year. The Daniels reside at 306 Terrace Boulevard in Val.

FAR OUT DEPARTMENT

The following is alleged to have been said by Attorney General John Mitchell to Kandy Stroud, a reporter for Women's Wear Daily, at a cocktail party:

"My dear, don't you realize that you can take a real trip on marijuana--- These stupid jerks who smoke the stuff don't realize what they're getting into. Now that we've stopped the flow of the milder stuff in the United States, they're going outside the country, and now the pushers are importing the cannabis plant from other countries. The same kind of stuff the opium smokers use. It's hashish, and you can really become addicted to it."

Individual fraternity smokers are scheduled for tonight (Tuesday), during which rushees will be given nametags, according to Interfraternity Council President Mike Strom.

Thursday, Strom said, invitations will be sent out to rushees for individual fraternity parties, which are scheduled for the weekend.

Rush registration, which began during orientation week this year for the first time, ended Monday, after 130 VSC students had been signed.

Membership bids are to go out from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 16, Strom said.

The College Union Board will present "Big Brother" for the fall concert Oct. 21, and will sell tickets beginning Monday, Oct. 12, from the office of Ken Ferrell, director of Student Activities, located upstairs in the Student Union Building.

Tickets are to cost $1.00 each upon the presentation of ID cards.

Criminal Justice Major Now Offered By VSC

The Department of Sociology at Valdosta State College has announced the development of a Criminal Justice education program leading to a Bachelor of Science degree.

The new program, directed by Mr. Ray M. Rice, begins fall quarter, 1970. Students in the program are allowed to take courses such as sociology, political science, psychology, history, and English, as well as specialized criminal justice courses, Rice said.

Students wishing to pursue a degree program must obtain a minimum of 20 quarter hours on the Junior college level in criminal justice, he said. However, he added that any student can take criminal justice courses at VSC by taking the course as a special student.

Simultaneously, the office of financial aid has opened a program of grants and loans for students in the law enforcement program.

OUR TENNIS COURTS

When Will We Get To Use Them?

The new VSC tennis courts are coming along real well. They have been coming along real well for quite a while now. We were wondering when we would get to use them but no definite answer can be found. The closest we got was two to three weeks.

would be fine for tennis play. They are located adjacent to the parking lot with an access bridge across "VSC Creek".

The location and the access will make the courts very convenient for use by all of us

BRIDGE GAP

...pt to bridge the gap between students and faculty and administration introduced on campus the past summer in the form of an action line which will be continued this quarter.

Enacted largely by the VSC Chapter of the Association of American University Professors the weekly column was begun to answer pertinent questions from students about campus life and policies than can be answered by members of the faculty and administration.

Students who wish to submit questions can do so by dropping them in the inter-campus mail slot of the VSC

Post Office addressed to this newspaper.

The questions will then be relayed to AAUP where Dr. R.C. Moore, secretary of the organization, will route them to the faculty member or administrator best qualified to answer them.

Questions directed at the Student Government Association or to other student organizations will be directly relayed to that organization by The SPECTATOR.

Questions should be typed or written legibly and should cover all points of the question. Although questions must be signed, names will be withheld on request.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

The Seaboard Coastline Railroad is seeking to terminate rail passenger service on the famous South Wind from Montgomery, Alabama to all of Florida. This will cripple passenger service in your area. To combat this dastardly deed, I wish to sound the alarm to people and their representatives to oppose this move to take away from you, the public, this valuable train service. You may contact the Interstate Commerce Commission, Mrs. Virginia Mae Brown, Chairman, Washington, D.C. and protest by wire or in writing. Public hearing in your area should be requested also. Also, you may contact "the voice of the railroad passenger" - the National Association of Railroad Passengers by writing directly to me. Dear friends,

We see as hypocrisy the extravagant celebration of Christmas when there is no peace on earth. So our group feels it is time for a Christmas boycott. We are not going to buy presents this year, nor are we going to receive them. We will do without decorations, and may be fasting on Christmas day instead of feasting.

Instead of spending, we will work for peace on earth by giving our money to help make amends for the suffering we have caused -- such as by financially adopting a Vietnamese child, and by giving our time to stop the war. We are calling for people to put peace back in Christmas -- what better way to observe the birth of Christ than to bring an end to the war this year?

We are counting on college groups to do most of the local work. Here are some possible approaches for organizing the boycott:

1. Contact local clergy -- many should be receptive to taking commercialism out of Christmas and putting peace back in.
2. Organize picket lines at department stores and shopping centers.
3. Do guerilla theater on the sidewalk in front of large stores. Dramatize the horrors of war or the contradictions in the thinking of the military.
4. Leaflet at high schools, train stations, churches and shopping centers.
5. Urge fellow students not to go home for vacation unless their parents agree to participate in the boycott.

FRANKLY SPEAKING

STANDARD OIL, ASTRONAUT TELL DIRTY STORIES

from the Tribal Messenger

DENVER -- (CPS) -- Colorado court has reached a preliminary finding that Standard Oil's Chevron F-310 ad campaign starring astronaut Scott Carpenter is fraudulent.

In California Mrs. Sandra Lee Cartt, a Los Angeles school teacher, used the mobile emission units operated by the California Air Resources Control Board to test her car before and after F-310 and discovered the emission levels went up while she was using F-310. She is filing suit against Standard Oil Co. of British Columbia Ltd. for fraudulent advertising in the F-310 campaign.

Larry Luce, writing for the ecology journal Earth Times stated that only cars with especially dirty engines were used for the "before F-310" tests and that "the company itself concocted an extremely dirty gasoline and put this into the test cars, fouling their carburetors and PCV (anti-pollution) valves. This fouling in turn resulted in richer fuel-air rates and a consequent increase of unburned hydrocarbon vapors in the exhaust."

The California Air Resources Control Board, after studying F-310's effects on "vehicles in a normal state of maintenance, rather than only those with 'dirty engines,' reported on May 1 "no appreciable change in emission after using F-310."

In Hawaii, a state senate standing committee examined the "tests" and reported, "the tests do not warrant the advertising claims made by Chevron. The advertising, cleverly designed to capitalize on the current public concern over air pollution, does a disservice to the public by making exaggerated and misleading claims.

In the ad photos, there is a sign on the building in the background which says "Standard Oil Company Chevron Research Center." However, Standard has admitted that the building was the Palm Springs Courthouse. Mrs. Florence Ambler, a clerk for the Palm Springs Police Department, and six policemen have presented testimony that charges that there were two separate balloons used in the "test" which they saw being photographed in the parking lot of the Palm Springs Courthouse.

One of the balloons was clear and the other was solid black. The ads lead one to believe that there was one balloon which was clear but turned black after being attached to a car which did not use F-

310. Duplicate tests by rival oil companies indicated that exhaust soot would not blacken the balloon evenly as shown in the Chevron ads but that the soot would sink to the bottom because of condensation.

Says Mrs. Ambler, "The facts haven't changed, despite their continual alibing. That this is a plot against Standard by their competitors is a lot of double talk. I'm a 15-year credit card holder with Standard. I have nothing to gain, none of us have anything to gain by falsifying this. These are just the facts. We are citizens and intelligent people who are not going to take it."

Even if Standard's claims were true, particulate matter (dirty exhaust) is less than two percent of all air pollution caused by automobiles. The really harmful air pollutants are the invisible, carbon monoxide lead nitrogen oxides, and unburned hydrocarbons. Although Standard at first claimed that they could cut unburned hydrocarbons by 50% in all cars, and in statements to California and U.S. Federal air pollution officials, Standard of California has said it makes no claim that

F-310 reduces even particulate matter.

One reason Standard is using such tactics to get on the anti-pollution bandwagon is to cover up for the untold damage caused by their "criminal negligence" to quote the Justice Department, in offshore drilling operations in the Gulf of Mexico.

The 40,000 gallons a day of oil which created a slick covering up to 70 square miles of sea would have been prevented in a storm choke had been in use on a well when an explosion occurred. The storm choke is required by federal law but according to a recent article in Sports Illustrated, it is common practice for companies to remove the choke with full knowledge of federal officials.

In one year, government officials checked only 20 percent of the oil fields in the gulf.

Oil companies are supposed to be fined $2,000 a day and/or imprisoned six months for each violation of federal regulations.

REFLECTIONS:

From Two Spectators

The beginning of Fall Quarter traditionally marks a time of change for most students, and especially for freshmen, and the impressions the first few days, for both freshmen and upperclassmen, are unique. The two columns below were written from two points of view, that of an upperclassman (Mike Hill) and a freshman (Chuck Clark) and are concerned with their first few days on campus.

by Mike Hill

The leaves had already begun to fall when I left home to return to Valdosta, and even though they haven't started that there, that was the sort of mood I was in - feeling the end of something. It had something to do with the sort of summer I had, but mixed in was the knowledge that all the activities and experiences, and friendships of last year were truly gone. Everything dissolves during the summer and it doesn't really count, but when school starts back and you're here where it all happened, you really know it's over. That last year is truly gone.

Many of us aren't back, gone away to get married or drafted, or graduated, or just not back, and those that are feel their absence. We feel another year older, too, especially watching all the little freshmen scurrying around, excited, anxious, looking for friends and lovers in a place in the nebulous social jungle that doesn't really exist except for most freshmen and the upper classmen who believe in it.

The feeling wears away, of course. It did last year. But there's still the knowledge that a year of college is like a whole life time. You're here and you go away, leaving others behind. Or you stay and others go away. Everything moves faster here.

Last year I couldn't walk past Ashley Hall without running into girls I knew or friends picking up dates, and now Ashley is closed. It was the center of last year's social life for many of us. Now it will probably be the big dorm, Langdale hall, and I can't get over the feeling I got when I first saw it - that it's a hospital and there are sick patients behind every window. Ashley may have been old, but it had personality.

I walked around campus with a friend the other night when the college had a dance. It was her last night here. She is from Valdosta and was here last year, but was to go in the morning to the school to which she had transferred. We went through Langdale, the student center, and spent a few minutes in the lobby of the gym where the dance was counting people we knew. We finally got to 15 and decided that that was a damn small number.

We told each other that most upperclassmen don't come to those things and we said I'd know many more people by the end of the quarter, which is true. But we also knew that those who did not come back couldn't be replaced.

"It's just a mood," she told me. "It'll go away."

by Chuck Clark

Amid the harrowing days of confusion known as Orientation and Registration, campus attention turns to that annual enigma, the freshmen. As a freshman, I can see what's going on. Or at least I think I can. Male upperclassmen chase my female counterparts; fraternities woo us as prospective members; professors advise us with courteous indifference; all in all, we are a focal point.

Meanwhile, in the midst of all the excitement, we as of late high school students concern ourselves with survival. My dormitory room contains fragments of the home I have left. With blood still flowing from the freshly-cut apron strings, I bravely blow my nose and wade into the horrors of higher education.

We freshmen are awed by the magnitude of college. Courses, registration, buildings, activities--all pass in a blur. We wonder who managed to organize everything and if they did. I wander around the campus in a daze, and I bolster my waning courage by telling myself "I'm a college kid now". But my inner voice keeps whining "what am I doing here?"

And the Deans. How many Deans can one college have? People keep telling me to go see Dean this or Dean that. I've met a lot of nice people that way. I still don't know if they're Deans or not, but they looked important and they were a lot of fun to talk to.

It's really a lot of fun having a new home and a lot of new friends but to me it bears a striking resemblance to a Yippie convention.

The Spectator, formerly the Campus Canopy, is in the process of total reorganization for this school year, and is suffering from a severe lack of equipment which was supposed to have arrived before Fall Quarter began and didn't.

Nevertheless, there is a paper this week, however late it may be. It was put together entirely with one lonely and outgrown piece of equipment and does not resemble what the Spectators of the future will be. Until the Spectator staff can get it together, we ask you, the students of VSC, to bear with us.

We can still use students who are capable of writing a news story or who are capable of learning and who are interested. We're in room 11 of the Student Union Building.

NEW PROFESSOR

Mr. Dunbar's educational experience also includes a year at Talladega College during which he taught English and French and served as Coordinator of Extra-Curricular Activities. He is a member of Alpha Chi National Honor Society, the American Library Association and was listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

Chancellor Simpson told us during his visit here last week that we, the college-age youth, don't have a sense of humor. Maybe he's right. He also said his generation "wrote the book" on the generation gap and that while our "generational conflict" is more conforming, it's not as big. He's wrong.

When the good Chancellor was an undergraduate, most of the students were satisfied with the way the older generation was running the world, or at least agreed with the principles upon which they ran it. So it was far easier to use college as a four-year escape from the "real" world, and turn their attention to the traditional college pranks and social life until they graduated.

The generational conflicts which occurred then, which the chancellor mistakenly thinks were different from those today only in that they were greater, were on an individual basis, as he said, and centered around the change from an agriculturally oriented economy to an industrial one. But the goals hadn't changed, that of keeping the wolf away from the door, even though the methods had. The idea was to stock the pantry, and those most successful measured their success by how full the pantry was and by what kind of car sat in the garage next to what kind of house, what kind of neighborhood. Keeping up with the Joneses was the thing.

Today, it's become a little different, even here in the South. A growing number of college-age youths are rejecting the ideologies of their parents - and the war and the pollution which they brought. And what the Chancellor doesn't seem to understand is that this time, it's not a change of method, but of goals. Many of us aren't concerned with acquiring things as we are with saving what we already have and are losing--like our green earth and the young men on it who are fighting a political war.

The efforts of our parents makes it possible to keep the wolf away from the door far easier than they had it, while we try to convince them, like the Chancellor's generation had to convince their parents, that it's time for a change - a far greater change than the Chancellor realizes.

The college campus has become a center for action to stop the war and pollution which today's better education and communications systems (thank you to our parents) make us more aware of.

Maybe there has been some progress made. But pollution seems to be getting worse and young men are still dying. It's frustrating. But it isn't humorous.

CURFEW: The Channels Are Open

by Lee Ann Coughlin

One of the biggest things not coming to college, for many freshmen, is loosening the knot of the home tie. It's an experimental stage in which a student learns to develop his own rules, and this year, when women have been given an even greater opportunity to develop their own rules than ever before, according to Dean of Women, Sarah Fickertt.

Last fall, for instance, she said, students petitioned the SGA for abolition of curfew hours which resulted in substantial changes.

According to Mrs. Fickertt, the previous ruling for all women had been 12:00 weeknights and 1:00 weekends. In the spring quarter, senior women were given open hours, however, and junior women with a 2.5 average were exempt from curfew rules, she said.

She said before the rule change, signouts had been mandatory and students had been allowed to sign out overnight only on weekends. Since then, she said, signouts have been declared unnecessary, and it's now possible for students to leave campus on both weeknights and weekends.

Dean Fickertt said that part of the reason sophomores weren't in the new ruling is because of what she terms the "soph slump." She defined the slump as a growing up period in which the student is confused about his direction in life and as a result can lose interest in school.

Some freshmen do not agree that freshmen and sophomore women aren't mature enough to handle the responsibility of setting their own curfews, however.

"I feel that the curfew rules are too conservative," said one freshman. College students are here for responsibility and I think the time they are to come in should be up to them."

"If there are parents who want curfews for their children then they can specify what restrictions they would like enforced on their children but there are parents who feel that their children are mature enough to take on the responsibility of choosing their own curfew and these kids should be allowed to take on this responsibility," said Kitty Cobb, another freshman.

"First quarter freshmen should have some curfew due to the big adjustment from high school to college," said another freshman, but added that students should be mature enough by now to set their own curfew, including freshmen."

Another freshmen suggested also that girls' rooms should be opened for male visitors for the afternoon hours, such as from 2:00 to 6:00 p.m.

"When girls reach the age of 18, or become a freshmen in college, they should be able to handle this situation," she said.

Mrs. Fickertt said channels between students and the administration are open and added that she doesn't believe the present curfew will be long lasting.

The first step in seeking a change for the VSC curfew system, she said, is to contact student representatives of the SGA.

"I think the situation can be improved," said one freshman, but added that it would take work by freshmen women to petition the SGA and to follow up the petition.

The Peace Corps Is Here

Two Peace Corps Representatives arrived on campus Monday and are to remain through Wednesday to acquaint interested students and faculty members with current program needs of the international service agency.

In addition to manning a booth in the lobby of the Student Union Building, the recruiters will be speaking to certain classes and would be happy to speak to anyone who is interested in the Peace Corps.

Job descriptions for different Peace Corps programs will be available, as will other necessary information pertinent to the service agency. Included in the three-day visit to the campus is a film entitled "One Step at a Time" dealing with the problems of development to be shown at 7:00 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Union Projection Room.

The Peace Corps Representatives, both young women, are Miss Anita Botti, a psychology graduate of West Virginia University and a Peace Corps volunteer in the West Indies for two years, and Miss Elsa Valle, a Host Country National from the Philippines who trained prospective Peace Corps volunteers for the Philippines.
